HINGHAM CHIEF KILLS BANDIT

THREAT OF CONTEST OVER BIG ESTATE

PROVIDENCE, Sept. 3.—Mrs. Elizabeth Blair Mohr, facing a charge of conspiring to bring about the murder of her husband, Dr. C. Franklin Mohr, today declared that the charge against her was the result of a "frame-up" on the part of the three men who are accused of carrying through the shooting.

She absolutely denied her guilt, in a statement issued just before the funeral of her husband. She herself had made all arrangements for the funeral.

At the same time, it became known that a strong contest over the slain doctor's estate is a practical certainty. The estate is estimated as high as $500,000. It is understood the doctor left no will, except a rough draft of the disposition he wished made of his money. This draft, which it is stated is not in legal form, was found among the papers in his safe deposit boxes.

Neighbors of Dr. Mohr said today that the doctor had received many "Black Hand" letters threatening his life—most of them signed either with a black hand or with a skull and cross bones.

Dr. Mohr's funeral was held today, with interment at Swan Point, Pawtucket. This occurred shortly after Mrs. Mohr's statement.

ADMITS ROOKE LETTER.

Mrs. Mohr admitted writing to George Rooke, a brother-in-law of Miss Burger who was in the automobile with Dr. Mohr when he was shot, warning him not to allow Miss Burger to go with the doctor to the Newport villa. But she denied that warning meant any intention on her part to harm the doctor or Miss Burger. She said:

"I am absolutely innocent.

"I knew nothing about the dreadful conspiracy, until the detectives told me.

"Those men shot and killed Dr. Mohr

The bodies of six hundred of the men drowned in this disaster have been recovered.

Allow New Bill in Railroad Suit for $120,000,000

Judge De Courcy of the Supreme Court today allowed the plaintiffs in the suit of the minor stockholders of the New Haven and Boston & Maine railroads, who seek to to hold the directors of the road from 1903 to 1909 responsible for losses of $120,000,000, to amend their bill as requested.

This is a big victory for the minor stockholders and means that the suit will go on unless it strikes further legal snags.

Boy Hit; Autoist 'Goes for Doctor' and Disappears

An unidentified automobilist knocked down and probably fatally injured four-year-old Joseph Riley of No. 133 Harvard street, Cambridge, today. Saying he was going after a doctor, he jumped into his car and drove off. The number of the automobile was taken and the police are now investigating.

The accident happened near the lad's home on Harvard street. After knocking the boy over the chauffeur assisted the boy into the cobbler shop of William Curiat at No. 118 Harvard street. He told the cobbler he would call a doctor. When the doctor did not appear after a reasonable time Curiat notified Patrolman Anton Diehl, who summoned an ambulance. The boy had meanwhile lain suffering in the shop without medical attention.

HINGHAM BANDIT SNAPPED JUST AFTER CAPTURE TODAY

Robert or Wallace R. Williams, one of the two auto thieves who beat Chief James and escaped from the Hingham Jail. Williams was caught after his pal had been killed. Chief Urquhart of Arlington is holding him.

JAIL BREAK AND PURSUIT ENDS IN GUN BATTLE

Police Chief Washington I. James of Hingham shot and killed James Harmon on Lincoln street, in Hingham, today, after Harmon and his pal, Robert Williams, had beaten the chief nearly to death and escaped from jail.

Harmon fired three times at the chief and missed. The chief, though at the point of collapse, fired once and killed. Then the chief keeled over from the beating he had received in the jail.

Williams, the other fugitive, fled, but was captured at the point of a revolver by Patrolman Ira Adams in the yard of Walter A. S. Crimes of Hingham, secretary to Alanson S. Higelow.

Chief James is in a very serious condition. He was hammered and clubbed in Hingham jail by Harmon and Williams. His nose was smashed flat, with the bones splintered.

The chief's skull was said to be fractured. Dr. Charles Whelan, whose auto the chief used to chase the fugitives, said that it was impossible to tell on first examination whether the skull was fractured. It was feared that the chief would not survive, but Dr. Whelan said at noon that the chief probably would pull through. But he went through about as much as a man can suffer and survive.

Harmon and Williams were two of the three auto bandits who were captured in Quincy square Wednesday night after committing a break in Hingham and fleeing in a stolen auto.

After they broke jail today, leaving Chief James locked in, they fled out on Lincoln street. When Chief James, released from jail, started in pursuit he was followed by a fast-gathering posse.

The chief, who had been locked in a cell by the bandits, with the jail door also locked, was found and freed by William Green and Walter Pratt, motorman and conductor on a trolley passing the jail. They recognized the bandits, who were hurrying along North street.

The trolleymen, suspecting trouble, ran to the jail, broke in and released the chief and summoned Dr. Whelan.

Police and citizens joined the pursuit with revolvers and guns.

GRODNO, RUSSIA STRONGHOLD, CAPTURED

By International News Service.

BERLIN, Sept. 3.—Field Marshal von Hindenburg's army has captured Grodno, the last fort in the Czar's second line of defence held by the Russians.

Official announcement of the capture of the great Russian fortress is made in today's report from the general staff.

German troops it states, rapidly forced the passage of the Niemen River after capturing the Russian forts. There was fighting in the streets of Grodno. The city is now in the hands of the Germans.

The city of Grodno is one of the most important strongholds in Western Russia. It is only eighty miles southwest of Vilna, a strategic point commanding the railways to Petrograd and about fifty miles from the East Prussian frontier.

The railway connecting Warsaw and Petrograd passes through Grodno, and therefore the German victory is of tremendous import in that it may further open the way for a great German drive on the Czar's capital.

The town is the capital of the province of Grodno in Lithuania, bordering on Poland, one of the most important districts of Russia. The population is about fifty thousand, more than one-half being Jews, and the manufactures include tobacco, machinery, soap, candles and war munitions.

ALLIES FROWN ON PEACE PROPOSAL

By JOHN EDWIN NEVIN,
Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3.—President Wilson sees no immediate possibility for a move to reconcile the European belligerents. The time may come soon, however, when he can act, and consequently he will hold open the suggestion of Pope Benedict, that concerted action by the neutrals should be taken and this government renew its original offer of mediation.

The great obstacle to peace at the present moment is the determination of Germany to retain certain of the territory she now holds and to insist that certain indemnity be paid, and the united sentiment of France and England that to consent to any peace plan while the honors remain with Germany, so far as the land fighting is concerned, would mean a renewal

MRS. BREWER IS BRIDE OF SON'S COLLEGE MATE

Mrs. Francis W. Brewer, millionaire resident of Boston and Hingham, was married today at her Hingham home to Charles LeRoy Cleaver, a college mate of her son at Harvard.

Mrs. Brewer is the widow of Francis W. Brewer of No. 362 Commonwealth avenue, the man who was responsible for many of the fine trees which are now the pride of Hingham.

Cleaver, who becomes the stepfather of a man only two years his junior, is a second year law student at Harvard. He returned Wednesday from the Summer camp in Maine, where he has been teaching boys.

At the Brewer estate in Hingham today no one was admitted to the house; but there were signs of pleasant activity there. Inquiries at 1 o'clock drew no information. The inquirers were told to return late this afternoon.

Nevertheless it became known that the marriage had taken place at noon. It was expected that after a brief honeymoon Cleaver and his bride would return and live at the Brewer home on Commonwealth avenue.

The marriage intentions of the two were filed in Cambridge some time ago.

FOSS WELCOMES SUMMONS TO COURT

Former Governor Foss telegraphed the AMERICAN today from Newburyport, where he stopped on his prohibition campaign tour, that he would welcome a summons into the Boston Municipal Court tomorrow for criminal libel, as threatened by Dennis D. Driscoll, former Penal Institutions Commissioner.

Driscoll's threat came as the result of a letter from Foss to District Attorney Pelletier, in which Foss declared that former Mayor Fitzgerald had tried to have Foss appoint Driscoll to the State Prison Commission, in return for which Driscoll was to call off strikes then existing in plants controlled by Foss.

Throngs of Tenants Will Flock to Inspect

The suites that are advertised in the "Apartment To Let" columns of the Boston AMERICAN today. Some of them will go on tours of inspection next Sunday, some on the holiday Monday; and some tomorrow. But those who go out TODAY will have the advantage. Remember the old saying, "The early bird catches the worm."

The "worm" in this particular case is a desirable suite. The supply will not be equal to the demand this Fall—at least that's what the wiseacres predict.

There are many reasons given for this condition. Among them are: Fewer apartment houses have been built during the past year than in recent years; the war in Europe has made residence in Boston forced in some cases, and the increased desirability of apartments.

The AMERICAN is Boston's renting medium, and its "Apartment" columns are the recognized guide to vacancies. The illustrated Addendum, which was recently announced, will be out today, and all those who desire FREE copies should apply at

BANDIT SHOT DEAD IN HINGHAM

Two Auto Thieves Beat Chief James and Escape From the Jail.

States Naval Magazine at West Hingham, turned out with orders to "shoot to kill."

Women were warned by telephone to all homes on the exchange lines to stay in doors.

The fire alarm gave warning and called out the men.

But, over and above the desperate attack on the chief, the sensational pursuit of armed citizens, the arousing of the whole town and even about the actual killing of the fleeing Hanlon, there was the unforgetting grit and vitality of the nervy police chief, "Wash" James.

WOUNDED LAST FEBRUARY.

The chief had not fully regained his strength from the triple wounds he received from bandits last February.

The game head of the Hinghan department was nearly dead when let out of jail. But he started in pursuit and, after being fired at three times by Harmon, fired only one shot and caught his man squarely between the eyes.

The trolleymen who released the chief called Dr. Charles Whelan, a college coach, who came in his automobile. The chief got a second auto for Harmon had gone away with it after beating him over the head with it.

Directed by citizens, the chief in physician drove up Lincoln street where they overtook Harmon and Williams crouching behind a bush.

FIRED THRICE AT CHIEF.

The chief jumped out of the car. Blood was streaming from his smashed nose. His head was corrugated with lumps and ploughed with gashes. He was in great pain, but his wits rose hot and white over his pain.

The chief ran straight toward the bushes behind which Harmon and Williams crouched.

Harmon fired three times at the chief with the chief's own gun.

Every shot missed the chief, but one or two of them nearly fetched a coming citizens.

Then the chief fired once and one was enough. Harmon died. The chief collapsed. Williams ran, but was later caught without a fight.

This is the story of Chief James, as told to Town Constable Thomas H. Buttimer.

"Early this morning I went up to a restaurant to get some breakfast for the two men, Harmon and Williams. I returned and entered the lockup to take their breakfast down to them.

HARMON ATTACKED HIM.

"As I opened the cell door of Harmon he pounced on me. I was knocked down. He must have taken my keys and unlocked the cell where Williams was.

"Williams came out and hit me with a hammer. Then they both struck me together with a hammer and a club. Then they rushed out the door. Bleeding, I called for help and then started in to chase them.

"You know all that happened after that."

Williams, who is known as Robert or Wallace R. Williams and also as Walter Welsh, was held by Judge Kelley in Hingham District Court until September 10 in $5,000 for assault with intent to kill on Chief James, in $500 for entering the Huntley garage, and in $100 for larceny of the Dillingham auto. He was taken to Plymouth jail in lack of bail.

CHIEF TELLS OF FIGHT.

Chief James was taken to the police station and put in the upper room, directly over the cells where Harmon and Williams attacked him. He revived enough to tell Town Counsel Buttimer a little about the way he was attacked.

The body of Harmon was brought to Downing's undertaking rooms.

DESCRIBE BATTLE.

William Green and Charles E. Pratt, motorman and conductor on the Bay State Street Railway, were the men who released Chief James from the cell where the bandits had locked him. They witnessed the battle that followed. Green told this story:

"We had just finished our run. We left our car in the barns and took another car that came up past the police station.

"It was just 8:10 when we passed the station. Two men were walking down the street. I said: There go those yeggmen. I wonder why there is no officer with them.'

"We jumped off the car and ran to the police station door. By that time we could hear someone yelling inside. The door was locked. We banged it in and found Chief James, badly cut and bruised, locked in a cell.

"We let him out. He was half dazed. We got Dr. Charles Whelan in a hurry. As the doctor arrived, Chief James seemed to recover his strength. He climbed into the doctor's car and we started the way the two men had gone.

"We went down Main street till someone yelled to us.

"They turned along Lincoln street and Hardett avenue."

SAW MEN HIDING.

"The machine turned that way. We saw the two men hiding in the bushes along the road. The chief and Dr. Whelan jumped out of the car and Dr. Whelan pulled a gun and shot. The men in the bushes returned the fire. Chief James pulled his gun and shot one of them through the head. The bullets went back and forth for a minute; then the other man ducked out and ran.

"He got away, and then Chief James keeled over."

Not only had Chief James just recovered from a similar attack, but he recovering from his February wounds, but he plunged into an unusually eventful week, even before the shooting of today.

At the funeral of John D. Long the chief was knocked down by one of a pair of back horses. He rolled ten feet, but jumped up and resumed work on guiding traffic.

TOOK PART IN CHASE.

The next day, although lame from being knocked down, he took part in the exciting chase for Harmon and Williams who then were caught at the Huntley garage. When the alarm was given the chief took up the pursuit by automobile and made a rapid trip to Quincy on the auto burglars' trail.

The chief's friends said only yesterday that he should be careful not to overtax his returning strength. They had suggested that he "rest a little. Then today's crash came.

One of the most graphic descriptions of the injured chief in pursuit of the two bandits was given by Porter Souther, crossing tender of the N. Y. N. H. & H. R. R. who said:

"At 3:15 this morning I saw Chief James and Dr. Whelan in the auto chasing Williams. The chief was an awful sight. His clothes were covered with blood and his hair was all matted. Blood was streaming down his face and dripping all over the auto.

"They chased the man down Fern road to Miles road, and from there toward the Hunting place. The chief certainly had his grit with him, and notwithstanding the protestations of Dr. Whelan insisted on keeping on. He said he would chase the man until he dropped."

Patrolman Ira Adams, who caught Williams, described the capture as follows:

"The men searching had all drawn their guns. I saw my man along in a clump of bushes on the Walter Crimes place on Lincoln street.

KNEW HIM AT ONCE.

"I knew him at once because I was with him all day yesterday. I had my old automatic out. Its the kind you can depend upon. He was lying down as if in a sleeping pose, but he had his eyes open. I levelled my gun at him of course.

"Then I said, 'Throw up your hands or I will shoot.'

"He threw up his hands and I took him into custody. He told me that Harmon told him that he would never do time again if he could help it.

"Then he said that the right name of James Harmon, the dead bandit, was Frank Huntley, and that he lately did six months at Deer Island. The man I captured, who has been going under the name of Robert Williams, said his right name is Walter Welsh. He said he worked for six and a half years for T. J. Welsh of Cambridge."

Further description of Chief James' condition made his pursuit of the bandits seem nothing short of marvellous.

The bandits not only hammered the chief with the jail hammer, but they took his club and revolver and beat him with both of these weapons.

The chief's nose was smashed flat, so badly that all the bony structure of it was splintered and broken.

There are four or five lumps on the chief's head, as large as hen's eggs.

Sixteen stitches were taken to close cuts on the chief's head.

When the chief was shot last February, while trying to make arrests in Hingham square, he was wounded in the chest, side and right hand. Although he pulled through he was terribly weakened. He is past middle life and the strain on his strength and constitution was great.

WILLIAMS ARRAIGNED.

Immediately after he was captured Williams was taken before Judge Kelley of the Hingham District Court. Under the name of Wallace R. Williams he was arraigned on three charges: Assault with intent to kill Washington I. James; breaking and entering the garage of M. K. Huntley and larceny from the garage.

Judge Kelley asked the prisoner: "Have you anything to say?"

Williams replied, "I have nothing to say," and throughout the rest of the court proceedings he remained silent.

Town Counsel Thomas H. Buttimer appeared as counsel for the town of Hingham. He asked for high bail and a continuance. He said:

"I ask our Honor to continue the case. On account of the serious condition of Chief James it may be necessary to change the charge against Williams to a more serious one. The chief informs me that Williams struck him repeatedly on top of the head with a hammer."

CASE CONTINUED.

Judge Kelley continued his case until September 10, holding Williams under bonds of $5,000 on the first charge, $500 on the second and $100 on the third. Williams was then remanded to Plymouth Jail in default of bonds.

The self-possession of Williams never left him during the time after he was captured. He acted in a defiant manner and gave the police guard no end of trouble. As he was leaving the courthouse the newspaper photographers were waiting at the door to get snapshots of him.

Williams did everything possible to prevent the camera men from getting him. Finally the officers stood him up against a tree and taking hold of the hair jerked his head up so that he could be snapped. As they did so he growled, "Well, you didn't get me until now. Did you?"

MRS. MOHR SAYS SHE IS INNOCENT

Furnishes Bail of $10,000 and Is Released from Custody.

and then tried to frame me up. Yes, it was a frame-up.

"But my lawyers will have to give out all information.

ADMITS BOOKE LETTER.

"I wrote the letter to Mr. Booke. But you cannot believe from what I wrote there that I intended to harm either Miss Burger or my husband.

"All I wanted to do was to break up their friendship, which had ruined my home."

Mrs. Mohr has passed the night with her children at home after being released on $10,000 bail. She was perfectly composed. Mrs. Mohr has shown no excitement at any time since her confession. She was early at her husband's bedside at the Rhode Island Hospital before he died. She has smiled and laughed since her arrest. She made the funeral arrangements for her husband, it is the last detail.

She played with her children at her home this morning as though she had not a care in the world.

Mrs. Mohr with the three negroes, George Healis, Henry Spelman and Cecil Brown, are to be arraigned September 16 at Warren, in Bristol County, before Judge Hamnib. Miss Burger, who was in the automobile with Dr. and Mrs. Mohr, stopped on a lonely road, and who received a bullet in her leg and shoulder, is expected to appear as a witness at that time. She was today protected out of danger.

SEARCH FOR REVOLVERS.

The police today were still searching along the Bristol county road for the revolvers with which Dr. Mohr and Miss Burger were shot. The three men arrested have said they threw their revolvers into a brook. The weapons have not been found.

Post Inspector O'Neil of the Providence police today said:

"We have enough without the weapons."

The funeral arrangements of Dr. Mohr, as made by Mrs. Mohr, were carried out by Robert F. Jones, undertaker, one of the five bondsmen of the accused woman. The services were held at the doctor's residence in Elmwood avenue, with Rev. F. J. Bassett, officiating.

The arrangements also included an invitation to Charles M. Mohr, a son of Dr. Mohr by his first wife, although this son and Mrs. Mohr have always, it is said, been on terms of unfriendliness.

It was on behalf of his son that an appeal was made to the court to remove Mrs. Mohr from her position as custodian of the murdered man's estate. A contest over the estate was temporarily avoided by the surrender by Mrs. Mohr of the trust, presented to the court by Attorney Arthur Cushing. Charles Mohr was represented by Attorneys Hurley and Casey, who were made custodians in Mrs. Mohr's place.

ROUGH DRAFT OF WILL.

Accordingly the keys to the safe deposit vault in the Rhode Island Hospital Trust Company were turned over to these new custodians.

That a contest will follow later is considered certain.

After her arraignment in Warren on the charge that "she had aided, counselled and hired" the three negroes to kill her husband and Miss Burger, Mrs. Mohr was turned over to the custody of Sheriff Philo D. Cady of Bristol County.

Accompanied by the sheriff and her attorneys, Cushing, Carroll and McCarthy, she returned to Providence at 1:30 p. m. She was taken to Attorney Cushing's office at No. 16 College street to await the result of the search by her attorneys for suitable bondsmen.

APPEARS HEAVILY VEILED.

Meanwhile, Judge Brown of the Providence Superior Court awaited her appearance before him. As time dragged along and she failed to appear, he sent word to Cushing's office. He was told that they had not yet succeeded in the search for bonds but expected to succeed by 7 o'clock. Accordingly Judge Brown adjourned court at 4:30 till 7:15.

At that time Mrs. Mohr was escorted into court by her attorneys and Sheriff Cady. She was still dressed just as she appeared at police headquarters early in the morning, in her light colored straw hat, with its thick brown veil. Behind here were her bondsmen.

Assistant District Attorney asked that bail be fixed at $25,000, in view of the serious charge against her. Judge Brown, however, held that $10,000 was sufficient. This was offered by the five bondsmen, Attorney Arthur Cushing, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Gifford, neighbors of Mrs. Mohr, and Robert Jones, the undertaker in charge of the funeral today, and James M. Finan.

GIVES $10,000 BAIL.

The required $10,000 was not secured without a hitch at the last moment. Mr. and Mrs. Gifford's property as offered, together with that of Mr. Jones and Mr. Finan's, was found on an examination, insisted on by the Assistant District Attorney, to be short of $10,000. It was then that Mr. Cushing, Mr. Mohr's attorney, stepped forth and added all his personal property and real estate. This made a little more than the required sum, and Mrs. Mohr was released, to appear September 16.

On her way from the court room she met a squadron of a battery of cameras. She stopped just long enough to permit one of the photographers to set off a flashlight. At the report she started, exclaiming, "Oh, that frightened me! I have always been afraid of a report like that!"

PROTESTS HER INNOCENCE.

It was after the trying hunt for bondsmen had proved successful that Attorney Cushing issued a statement:

My client is innocent. Of that I am positive. She will have nothing to say tonight, and I doubt if she will have any statements to make until she makes them in court.

The police assert their belief that their hardest task is now over. Chief Inspector O'Neil, who has had charge of the murder hunt, announced positively that there were to be no more arrests.

The investigation, which resulted in the arrest of the three negroes and the murdered man's widow in such rapid succession after discovery of the shooting, is to be taken up now by the authorities of Warren, in whose jurisdiction the shooting took place.

These authorities, it was learned today, to the consternation of the many fashionable patients of Dr. Mohr, have taken possession of all the doctor's books and papers of the murdered physician.

These papers, it is whispered in Newport, may drag into the most unpleasant kind of publicity the names of scores of social celebrities who have made up the doctor's profitable clientele.

The doctor's practice had always been the subject of gossip in Newport and Providence. He is said to have made from it at least $46,000 a year. For some surgery cases almost fabulous sums have been named as his fee.

Efforts are already under way to get in touch with Dr. Mohr's first wife. Little is remembered here of the first Mrs. Mohr, except that she figured in a sensational alienation suit brought in New York, in 1897, by Denies She Offered $5,000 for the Slaying of Her Husband.

Dr. Mohr against Dr. William Stevens of No. 70 West Fifty-second street, New York. She is believed to be in New York. It is her son, Charles Mohr, who is in Providence now, seeking his share in the estate of Dr. Mohr, which is estimated at about $500,000.

The doctor was assessed in Providence for $75,000, and the villa in Newport is said to be worth now at least $75,000.

Although the police have gathered evidence which they consider almost as important as the signed confessions secured from Clell Victor Brown and George W. Healis and the oral admissions of Henry W. Spellman, Brown's half brother, yet the signed confession of Brown is the most complete summary of the "ambush plot."

OPEN ALL DAY SATURDAY

SIX full business days every week from now on—we welcome them because we and our employees have had a full Saturday holiday from July 4th to September 1st.

"WHAT'S THE GOOD OF THESE SATURDAY HOLIDAYS"

asks John Wanamaker, dean of American merchants. Here is his answer—not alone for his own store—but for all wholehearted stores and the public who patronize them:

"Use your eyes and see sunburnt people, and take notice of the fresh strength, new vigor and younger look on the faces of reinspired workers. . . . Really the fact is in sight that the thousands of workers return to their places with a better liking of each other and a finer appreciation of their customers who aided in making possible the long July and August Saturday and Sunday days of rest and change."

—Since The Shepard Stores started their full Saturday holidays, three years ago, more business has come in the five days than we formerly had in six.

—August, 1915, marks the apex of an ever-increasing business—straws that show the way TRADE WINDS are blowing.

—We hope all other merchants will now join the movement and make Saturday closing universal throughout Boston.

JEWS PROTEST HARVARD TEST ON HOLY DAY

Albert Hurwitz, president of the Young Men's Hebrew Association, said today that the matter of excusing Jews from taking the entrance examinations to Harvard on the Jewish Day of Atonement would be taken up direct with President Lowell when he returns to town.

"We directed a letter to President Lowell, calling his attention to the matter," said Mr. Hurwitz. "We received a letter from Dean Hurlbut denying our request to be excused from examinations on that day. We are by no means certain that the president personally received our communication. When he returns from his vacation it is probable that a delegation of Hebrews will wait upon him and explain our attitude.

"In as much as other colleges have made this concession to us, we hope Harvard may. As nearly 10 per cent. of the students at Harvard are of Jewish descent we feel we are entitled to be heard.

"To ask a Jew to take examination on this holy day is equivalent to asking him to abjure his faith."

The date of the regular entrance examinations for admission to Harvard comes on September 15, which happens to be the Jewish Day of Atonement, one of the holiest days of the whole year among Hebrews. The Young Men's Hebrew Associations and prominent rabbis called this fact to the attention of the several colleges holding examinations on this day and all except Harvard, it is said, arranged to accommodate Jewish students by holding examinations for them on some other date. Dean Hurlburt of Harvard offered to arrange matters so that Jewish students could dictate their answers. This, the Hebrews claim, does not remove the difficulty.

Tomorrow the Associated Young Men's Hebrew Associations will hold a mass meeting at Hotel Bancroft, Worcester, to protest the stand taken by Harvard.

MISS KATHERINE ANNA PHELAN, richest girl in Lynn, whose engagement was announced today.

Police Attacked in Bridgeport Strike

BRIDGEPORT, Ct., Sept. 3.—Rioting broke out today among the strikers at the West End plant of the Crane Company when a crowd of 500 attacked the police. Armed with stones, sticks, revolvers and other weapons, they inflicted serious cuts and bruises on three policemen and minor injuries on others.

RICHEST GIRL IN LYNN IS TO WED

The engagement is announced today of Miss Katherine Anna Phelan, said to be the richest girl in Lynn, to Carl Edward Conron of Danville, Ill. Miss Phelan is niece of Congressman Michael F. Phelan and daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Phelan. She makes her home with an aunt, Mrs. John Dyer, at No. 30 Greystone park.

The engagement is the result of a romance which started when she was bridesmaid at the wedding of her chum, Miss Florence McCarty, who married Mr. Conron's brother in 1913. At that time she met Mr. Conron. The acquaintanceship rapidly ripened into love, which culminated in the engagement today.

During the past two years Miss Phelan has figured prominently in Washington society. At the death of her father Miss Phelan inherited more than half a million.

Arrest Four Men for New Haven Wreck

BRIDGEPORT, Ct., Sept. 3.—Four men are under arrest on the charge of having removed fish plates on the rails of the Valley division of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, which act, it is alleged, brought about the wreck of a passenger train on August 27, 1911, at Maromas, resulting in the death of one passenger and injury to about sixty others. The men give the names of Sebastiano Lacana, Munsio Buchamo, Piola Garburo and Antonio Venelle. All are between thirty and thirty-five years of age. In all probability the men will be arraigned at the September term of the Fairfield County Superior Court.

NO MONEY TO FIGHT DIVORCE, SAYS EVELYN

By GRACE PHELPS.

LION MOUNTAIN, N. Y., Sept. 3.—"Harry Thaw, an insane murderer, bought himself out of Matteawan. Therefore, he can buy fifty divorces and 1,000 detectives, and I have not enough money to fight that. The effort would be useless and leave me poor. As I said before, he is a despicable cad."—Evelyn Nesbit.

In the above statement, written in Jack Clifford's camp in the Adirondacks, Evelyn Nesbit Thaw made it clear that she would not fight Harry Thaw's suit for divorce.

Asked whether she would deny the specific accusations of wrongdoing with John Francis of New York on which Thaw bases his petition, she replied with a shrug.

"What is the use?" Then, her eyes flashing, she continued: "Harry Thaw has done all he could to humiliate me, but I shall not give him the satisfaction of answering his despicable charges. He will go too far very soon and other people whose character he tries to smirch will not stand for it. I am giving him all the rope he wants. He will hang himself soon enough."

BECOMES THE MOTHER.

With her dancing partner and five-year-old Russell, the young woman had just returned from a nearby bathing beach. She had changed her bathing suit for a black velvet skirt and jacket, with a white blouse; twined around her dark hair was a chaplet of crimson Autumn leaves, which she had plucked from a branch hanging over the lake.

Little Russell, whose paternity Thaw denies, but who looks remarkably like him, tripped and hurt himself as he came running up the steps from the landing. In a trice Thaw and her troubles were forgotten and Evelyn Nesbit was all mother.

RUSSELL BORN IN 1910.

Contempt rather than anger was the attitude which Miss Nesbit, as she prefers to be called, displayed toward Harry's latest move. She laughed as she declined to tell the exact age of little Russell.

"I'll keep them guessing a while," she answered. "I will say that he was born in 1910, but not in Hamburg. Any one who knows Germany knows that if he had been born in Hamburg the data could be gotten by anybody, and Harry would have had it long ago."

When told that Thaw was probably in San Francisco, where she expects to open the season with Clifford, Miss Nesbit shuddered.

FEARS TO SEE THAW.

"Horrors! I hope I don't see him."

Henri, the butler, came around the corner of the house carrying a covered bird cage.

"He is taking Nino, my pet canary, back to New York," explained Miss Nesbit. "I expect to leave here Sunday for my house at No. 23 West Eleventh street, and Henri is going ahead to get everything in order. He thinks Nino too precious to trust to the care of any one else."

Then, calling Russell to put on his little red sweater, Miss Nesbit waved me a goodbye.

"It's almost time for the Thaw case to be ended, don't you think?" she asked a little wearily. "The people can thank me for one thing; they won't have to endure another nine years' tale."

ALLIES NOT YET READY TO CONSIDER TERMS OF PEACE

of the conflict within a comparatively short time.

This was learned today from the President's closest advisers. Within the last ten days he has received summaries of the result of confidential inquiries instituted by Ambassadors Marye at Petrograd, Gerard at Berlin, Penfield at Vienna, Sharp at Paris and Page at London.

They are understood to agree in substance that the opportune moment for any suggestion of mediation is not the present one. In fact both Ambassadors Page and Sharp have declared that England and France would consider a suggestion of mediation at this time as unfriendly. However, no attempt is made to minimize the great influence of the Vatican throughout Europe. The President very frankly told Cardinal Gibbons that he was ready to initiate any peace move that gave promise of the slightest success. He made no formal reply, however, and intends to feel out further all of the belligerents to see whether there is not a possibility of suggesting some entering wedge for an agreement.

U. S. MUST TAKE LEAD.

Cardinal Gibbons is understood to have told Secretary Lansing that the United States must initiate the movement. The Vatican is handicapped by its isolation through Italy's participation in the war. The smaller neutral powers practically are without influence, he said. But this country, by reason of its strong economic position and the fact that in its population is represented every belligerent nation, easily could start a peace movement without having its motives misunderstood.

Although officials do not expect immediate action because of existing conditions in the theatres of war, it is admitted everywhere that the action of the Pope will be beneficial. It will permit quiet diplomatic discussion and conferences of the sort that usually precede a general peace movement.

After his interview with the President, Cardinal Gibbons said:

"I can only tell you that I conveyed to the President a message from the Holy Father. The message related to the subject of peace. It cannot be made public yet. If I receive authority I shall be glad to make it public. The authority must come from Rome and we will have to confer about that.

"I regard the settlement of the controversy between the United States and Germany as affording an exceptional opportunity for peace proposals and as having placed the United States in a most advantageous position to act in this direction.

"It would of course be improper for me to speak in detail regarding the conference. But I may say it was of a very general and happy character. In a general way Mexico was also discussed.

"What do you think of the prospects for peace?" Cardinal Gibbons was asked.

"I think they are brightening," was the thoughtful, brief reply.

Germany's Peace Terms as Stated At U.S. Capital

By International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—In well-informed diplomatic circles it is reported this morning that the terms which Germany is willing to consider for peace proposals are substantially as follows:

1—The establishment of Poland into an independent kingdom, to be composed of all Russian Poland, part of Austrian Poland and a small part of German Poland.

2—Absolute freedom of the seas, established through a new international declaration of rights, to which all maritime powers shall be signatory. Germany will agree never again to establish a submarine blockade; England to make the North Sea a tributary water.

3—Co-equal rights and liberties for Jews in all lands to be guaranteed by all signatories of any treaty of peace.

4—Bessarabia, now Russian territory on the Black Sea, to be ceded to Roumania.

5—Austria-Hungary to be given a dominating influence in Balkan states.

6—Belgium to be restored and her sovereignty and future neutrality be guaranteed.

7—All French territory held by Germany to be restored to France.

8—That portion of Alsace held by France to remain a part of the German empire.

9—All German colonies seized during the war to be restored.

10—An indemnity to reimburse Germany for the cost of her military operations.

GIBBONS' VISIT TO WILSON STIRS GREAT INTEREST IN ROME

By International News Service.

ROME, Sept. 3.—News of Cardinal Gibbons' visit to President Wilson with a personal message from Pope Benedict XV. reached here today and was received with intense interest in all quarters.

Officials of the Vatican declined to comment on the matter, pointing out that only the Pope and his secretary of state, Cardinal Gasparri, could discuss the peace proposals authoritatively. From a reliable source, however, came the statement that in the message sent by the Pope to the head of the American government the following suggestions were made:

1—That President Wilson ask the warring powers of Europe to consent to an armistice while peace terms are discussed.

2—That representatives of the belligerents meet in a great conference.

3—That, if they wish, all the neutral nations may have representatives at this conference.

The immediate purpose of the Pope is to bring about an armistice through the united efforts of the Vatican and the United States, which the Pontiff believes are the only agencies capable to restoring peace.

He believes, it is said, that if a general lull in military operations could be effected all the nations now involved in the titanic struggle, or nearly all, would see the necessity for terminating the warfare.

It is understood also that the Pope has hopes of a general disarmament that would remove the danger of great wars in the future. Efforts to effect this, however, will not be broached at the present, but only when the powers have sent their representatives to a conference.

PALL MALL GAZETTE SAYS ALLIES MUST VANQUISH GERMANY

LONDON, Sept. 2.—The Pall Mall Gazette warns the United States today that hopes of peace at present cannot be fulfilled, intimating that the allies are firm in their determination to vanquish Germany so that it may never again threaten the peace of Europe.

"Germany is trying to pave the way to peace by professing the abandonment of piracy," it says, "but it is desirable that America should thoroughly realize how absolute and irremovable are the allies' views to the future peace, which means that a mere cessation of hostilities offers no attraction."

The Evening Standard comments as follows on Germany's acceptance of the American principles as to submarine warfare:

"We refuse to regard Germany's offer to America as either genuine or valuable. Behind it is the object of securing freedom of the seas, that is for us to insist that the navy shall not be fettered in order to please any great land power."

FOSS READY FOR SUMMONS TO COURT

of the Massachusetts Brewing Company and of the liquor interests with which they are allied in the concerted movement that is going on in the United States to prevent the submission to the people of the proposed amendment to the Constitution of the United States prohibiting the manufacture and sale of alcohol liquors. Driscoll may be interested to know that certain penalties are attached to such activities by section 353 of the corrupt practices act.

"AFTER BIGGER GAME."

I regret, however, that Mr. Driscoll feels aggrieved. I bear him no malice. It is not for him I am grinding, but much bigger game and I am grateful to him for beating this game out from cover. Revelant to his charge of criminal libel against me are all the facts of the campaign of the liquor interests and I shall of course subpena the officers and agents of certain corporations with their books and records and certain politicians and public officials. It is I who have sought and proposed an investigation so that the people may know the facts.

"I congratulate Mr. Driscoll upon his conspicuous sensitiveness to criticism. It is Driscoll the public will have to thank for disclosures that here in Massachusetts and before the primary election. I remind him however, in advance of the investigation, of the remark of a prominent politician, who said, 'don't sue anybody for libel, they may prove it on you.'"

Board May Avert Raincoat Strike

With the hope of forestalling a threatened strike Tuesday of employes of all the raincoat companies of Boston, the State Board of Conciliation and Arbitration today called a conference of representatives of employers and employed for tomorrow forenoon at the State House. One hundred employes of the C. & C. Raincoat Company of East Boston, who have been on strike because of the refusal of the management to reinstate a discharged employe, returned to work today, pending the conference.

Wants Submarines Built at Navy Yard

Congressman Peter F. Tague today petitioned Secretary of the Navy Daniels for an appropriation to put the Charlestown Navy Yard in readiness for the construction of submarines.

"The Charlestown Navy Yard has two ways on which the construction of four submarines can be undertaken at one time," said the Congressman. "The ways can be put into readiness at a maximum outlay of $50,000."

Bar Harbor Express Hit Mowing Machine

BAR HARBOR, Me., Sept. 2.—The Bar Harbor express, running at the rate of 60 miles an hour through here today, struck a mowing machine, killing the two horses attached to it, and carrying part of the machine for some distance on the front of the engine. Warren Bachelder, the driver, was walking alongside the horses and escaped without injury. The front of the engine was badly damaged.

Turner Fined at Lenox for Speed

LENOX, Sept. 3.—George E. Turner, Jr., the young man who recently challenged Kathryn Dahlgren to a road race from Lenox to Pittsfield, appeared in Lenox court today charged with operating a motorcycle at excessive speed and running his motorcycle with an open muffler, on the speed charge he was fined $25. The other charge was filed. He said he was out on a practice spin.

Portuguese Rebels Repulsed in Charge

PARIS, Sept. 3.—At Caxias, Portugal, insurgents tried to storm the barracks, but were repulsed by rifle fire. Dispatches from the Portuguese frontier, says the Journal's Madrid correspondent, state and persons arrested in the insurrectionary movement at Praga have been taken to Oporto, where they will be court-martialled.

Postpone Order in Anthracite Case

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3.—The Interstate Commerce Commission today announced that it had postponed the date making effective its order in the anthracite case from October 1 to December 1. By its decision in the coal case the commission cut $8,000,000 from the yearly revenues of the railroads in the coal regions of Pennsylvania.

GOOD NEWS FOR THE DEAF

If you are losing your hearing—if you are troubled with buzzing and ringing in the ears—if you find that your nostrils are clogged—if you hawk and spit in the morning—if you have given up hopes of finding relief, just go to Riker-Jaynes, or any other drug store, and purchase one ounce of Fluid Enserol. Mix this with one pint of warm water. Put two drops in the affected ear every night. Put one tablespoonful in a fourth of a glass of warm water and gargle throat and snuff up nose night and morning. Keep this up for a few weeks and test your hearing and you will be pleased to note the improvement. You will also, no doubt, discover that your catarrh has disappeared and head noises gone.

WOMAN FROM BROOKLINE IS HURT IN AUTO

Mrs. A. F. Avery of Brookline was seriously injured in an automobile accident at Thomaston, Me., in which Captain N. Webb Thompson, a retired sea captain was killed, one woman critically and several others dangerously injured. Mrs. Avery is suffering from serious internal injuries.

An automobile in which they were riding was struck by a Maine Central express train.

Captain Thompson was killed outright. Miss Verne Mitchell, fourteen, was thrown beneath the train and both limbs were amputated, one at the ankle and the other at the knee. She was taken to the Knox Hospital, where her condition is reported as critical.

The others injured were Mrs. A. F. Avery of Brookline, Mass.; Miss Iva Morse, a teacher, of New Rochelle, N. Y., who suffered severe shock, and Miss Lucille Pillsbury of Northampton, Mass., lower limbs, thigh and left arm badly bruised.

None of the party heard the approaching train and the car was driven directly in front of it, the crossing being a blind one on an up grade.

Miss Morse is a sister of Mrs. Avery and a cousin of Miss Pillsbury.

U. S. TO SETTLE WITH GERMANY "UNAIDED"

By International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3.—The United States intends settling all of its existing difficulties with Germany independent of outside suggestions.

This was made plain at the State Department today when Secretary Lansing and his aides declined to discuss the British newspaper comments that "England will not consent to any arrangement that raises a difference between passenger liners and other merchantmen."

The Secretary made it plain that the United States is acting for itself in securing the safety of its citizens on the seas and has no concern about how the British officials will regard the agreement.

Ambassador von Bernstorff was waiting today for the text of the German note to the United States amplifying his original acceptance of the submarine war principle that liners shall not be attacked without warning. He also was waiting for additional instructions so that he can end the Arabic incident.

He made it very plain that he considered the entire matter so far advanced toward settlement that the remaining details were comparatively unimportant. He said he had no appointment with Secretary Lansing, but he might see him tomorrow.

Ambassador von Bernstorff left the embassy early today. The officials in charge said that he had returned to New York for "over Sunday," unless he receives information that the expected communications have been started from Berlin. Inasmuch as Saturday is a short day in the State Department and Monday is a legal holiday, officials here declared they did not expect any further moves will be made in the German situation before Tuesday or Wednesday of next week.

This dramatic picture of the last moments of the torpedoed liner, on which two Americans lost their lives, was taken by Professor Alfred Still, of Purdue University, so close to the rising bow that his boat was in imminent peril of being sucked down with the great steamship. In the foreground is shown one of the oars of the lifeboat, which he was pulling for safety at top speed. Professor Still lost valuable manuscripts and $1,000 worth of scientific instruments, but clung to his camera throughout.

Their Married Life

Helen and Louise Go Shopping and Then Join Warren and Bob at the Cliff House.

Copyright, 1915, by International News Service.

"It certainly is a great town," announced Warren as they went out of the hotel a little after nine.

They had decided to look up a cafeteria and go there for breakfast. Helen had thought of the plan after the price of their first meal at the Castle House, and the cafeteria, a typical Western product, lured her eager eyes with fascinating scents and the fact that they had yet to explore one.

"Are you sure you remember the place?" asked Louise. "I am starving."

"Yes, it was about three blocks up this way," declared Helen, hoping vaguely that she was right.

Warren was sure to be cross if he were kept too long without breakfast, and as she was the pioneer of the party, she wanted things to be as nice as she had prophesied.

"Here it is," she said, triumphantly, as they stopped before a bakeshop and lunch room.

They all swarmed through the door and found themselves in a regular bakery, with rows of fascinating cakes and salads ranged along the counter and cold meat and breads on different shelves. In the back there was a dainty little restaurant where several people were eating. The entire place gave the party the feeling of a haven well reached.

"This is something like," said Warren contentedly, as he sipped delicious coffee and ate waffles.

Helen could not help bridling a little and when the bill was brought they all gasped. The entire amount was less than breakfast for one would have been at the hotel.

"Helen, I certainly hand it to you," said Bob, delightedly.

"I'm so glad you are satisfied," she said demurely.

"And now what shall we do?"

"How about you men going off for yourselves this morning?" suggested Louise. "To tell the truth, I am so tired of sightseeing after that zone yesterday that I don't want to look at anything for a day at least."

"And besides, we want to look at some shops. I have several things I want to buy," said Helen.

"Can you beat it?" from Warren. "They don't want to look at anything, but they can stand for a morning's shopping. Leave it to a woman."

"Well, I'll tell you," said Bob, "Warren and I want to go up to the fair grounds and go over the Palace of Machinery. We didn't see more than see it yesterday and they are going to get out an edition of the paper on the printing press there. We don't want to miss it."

"All right, we can shop and look around and then meet you people somewhere."

"The question is, where?"

"Somewhere for lunch!" suggested Helen.

"How about lunch at the Cliff House?" said Warren.

"It sounds wonderful," said Helen. "Where is it?"

"We won't tell you that. How about calling for you at the hotel about 12:30; then we can get out there around 1."

"All right, that will be fine. Come on, Helen," and the two were off walking le surely up the street.

The morning passed quickly enough. Helen bought a shirtwaist and they both bought some very pretty collars. Louise needed some silk stockings, and they wandered through several hat shops and saw some advanced Fall models.

"I'd love to buy a Winter hat," said Louise, pausing wistfully before a dark blue hat with some handsome algrettes shooting off the side.

"Now, don't be extravagant," said Helen practically.

"But I simply have to try this on," said Louise, and suiting the action to the word, she sat down before one of the little tables and the gray-haired saleswoman proceeded to push the hat down over her hair in the prescribed manner.

Louise took the hand glass and surveyed herself critically.

"I like this one, madam," said the woman, lifting out of the case a smart little light tan hat with wings of the same shade.

"Wouldn't you like to try this one, madam?" said someone coming up behind Helen, and before they had left the shop, Helen and Louise each owned a new Fall hat.

"I wonder what the men will say," said Helen.

"We'll go home now and wear them out to lunch," said Louise briskly, and by the time they had covered the distance to the hotel and refreshened up for lunch, Warren and Bob had appeared.

Warren did not talk extravagance as Helen expected, and both hats were duly commented upon. By the time they had reached the Cliff House, all four were in excellent spirits.

Helen was entranced with their table pushed into the alcove of the window overlooking the harbor and the sea.

"No wonder they call it the Golden Gate," said Helen. "It is gorgeous."

The seals on the rocks in the harbor performed beautifully for the edification of the foursome, diving and lashing around much to Helen's delight.

It was a very merry time and Helen thought to herself that she had been more than fortunate in avoiding any unpleasantness since they had left home. She wondered how long it would be before Warren got angry about some trivial thing, and then she scolded herself severely for borrowing trouble again when there was no reason for it. Perhaps the whole trip would be pleasant—she sincerely hoped so.

Making a Fuss Over Nothing

Many Women Suffer Needlessly Over Trifles

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

MOST women are potential heroines. In case of danger, a woman who is worth the name is self-sacrificing and brave. Many a girl who shrieks at sights of a mouse or a beetle will climb three flights of stairs in a fire to carry out a sick child.

But, after all, life isn't made up of emergencies. Few of us ever have the chance to prove ourselves heroines. And the judgment of the world is based on how we face the mice of life rather than on what we do when we meet its lions.

In keeping with the tendency to face great dangers and shrink at little ones, woman bears great sorrows and frightful tragedies nobly and well and settles herself to the point of a nervous breakdown over negligible pains and trifling slights.

My grandmother actually went out as a nurse during an epidemic of cholera in the little Western city where she lived. And she thinks nothing of a nightmare by her hysterical boy when thunderstorms that so frequently visit the Middle West.

Woman has a certain pioneer quality that makes her face bravely all tremendous emergencies and fuss and fume over things unworthy to take any of her energy.

How many women make their husbands' lives miserable by their insistence that all sorts of trifling dates be remembered.

A friend who has gone to bed with a nervous headache for no more overwhelming cause than the fact that her husband forgot the anniversary of the first day he ever saw her.

She expected a man who had a business to swing and large affairs to manage so that he might give her luxury and elegance, to do all that with one lobe of his brain and with another to remember to call her up every day at noon to tell her what his whole life was proving—that he loved her. Because he couldn't remember such things, she nagged him to the point where everyone expected separation or divorce to be a period to their love story.

And then came a crash. Mr. Smith lost practically his entire fortune and with it most of his credit. And nevertheless, nervous Mary Smith rose from her bed, put on a gingham apron, went into the kitchen she had not visited in ten years and set to making pies. The Smiths are now on the high road to fortune again because Mary, who could not bear to have her lightest wish neglected and her slightest whim forgotten, could bear the loss of everything that had seemed to made the whole of her selfish life.

Women can endure. And men will never fully understand it. Without a sense of the big things that would almost justify her in shrieking to high heaven. She either endures them with a tragic passiveness that commands respect, or she gets up and, with Amazonian force, conquers them.

But no woman who ever lived failed to suffer when the man she loved promised to telephone her at noon and had not succeeded by 1 o'clock.

Perhaps because so few of us have anything better to think about, we think about trifles. Perhaps as we go out into a world of larger interests, we will conquer the selfish love that makes us demand constant proof of fealty.

Until we do, until we learn not to make a fuss over trifles, we are bound to suffer needlessly. Loyalty, friendship, love itself are all proven in large ways. No failure in trifles undermines or disproves the beauty of any large devotion. And until we learn not to demand constant proof of affection, not to fuss over trifling omissions in attention and thoughtfulness we must indeed be "the weaker sex."

His First Glimpse of the Sea!

By NELL BRINKLEY

Copyright, 1915, by International News Service.

THE gypsying Inlander—used to waving fields of pale green and yellow grain and of corn; he wondered, watching it under the prairie wind, if the SEA was not like that); used to tiny bodies of water like a drop of a jewel, a chip off the great gem; used to whispering trees and flower fields; used to the brown road instead of the tossing Indigo waste and its invisible trails; used to the blue mountain instead of the towering seas where the great swells run; used to the soft rumor of the clattering creek instead of the great voice that fills the world around the coasts; used to the unending vistas of land instead of the abrupt white line of Land's End and the blue terror that moves beyond at his boot's toe—the gypsying Inlander saw the sea! And he wrote home and said: "It is lovelier than ever I thought—sure—sure!"

Why We Quarrelled

No. 9—The Wife Whose Husband Is a Bundle of Inconsistencies Tells Her Tale

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water

Copyright, 1915, by Star Company.

MY husband and I have quarrels about his ideas with regard to the equal—or unequal—standard, and his belief that he may say and do things which, if I did, would be indiscreet. He claims that I should avoid all appearance of evil. In this he is right, but if I should do this, so should he.

For instance, he is particular as to the kind of women with whom I am acquainted. If there has been a breath of scandal about anybody I meet, I must avoid her or displease Joseph.

Last Winter we met a pretty and bright little actress. From all that I could observe she was as good as she was pretty. Her husband was an agreeable chap who let her do much as she pleased. I liked them both.

But one evening this woman told me an amusing story, which was also rather risque, and I made the mistake of repeating it to my husband. I also explained that she had no evil thought in telling this tale, but that she was probably in the habit of talking quite freely to the people in her set.

"She meant no harm," I added, "for she told this in the presence of her husband. He laughed at it."

My husband frowned slightly.

"I do not like you to associate with women who talk like that, nor with men who laugh at their jokes," he said.

FOR THE GANDER ONLY

Yet the very next time that he and I chanced to be in company with this couple, I saw my lord and master chatting gaily with the wife, and laughing uproariously at some of her speeches. When we were alone together, I mentioned this fact.

"You see that she is very entertaining," I said.

"She is amusing, certainly," he replied, "but she is also given to making remarks of doubtful propriety. I don't want you to be at all intimate with her."

Then he told me of a jest that she had made.

"That was probably what you were laughing at when I saw you with her," I remarked.

"It probably was," he affirmed. "But I do not like to hear women say such things."

"Then," I accused, "why do you encourage them to say them? It's not fair for you men to egg women on, laugh at their indecent speeches, and then warn your wives away from them."

"We men have a right and a duty to guard our wives," my husband reminded me.

"And not to guard other women?" I asked.

"Certainly not. That is the other woman's business."

"It is unfair to applaud in a woman that which you condemn behind her back," I insisted.

THE OLD ARGUMENT

"You women do not understand these things," he returned, "because you do not know life as we men know it."

"Good is good, and bad is bad," I asserted.

"For a woman—yes. But not for a man," he rejoined.

It is the same way about his criticism of women's dress. He wants me to dress in the most conservative style. He declares that he hates false hair, powder and rouge. He will not even permit me to have my hair waved with hot irons.

"If the Lord had meant you to have curls, he would have given you curly hair," he remarked upon one occasion. "And, by the way, I do not want you to wear any of the extremely decollete dresses that are now in fashion."

This was when we were discussing a dance to which we had been invited.

I had spoken of the kind of gown I wanted to wear and had proposed having my hair dressed for the affair. I had not been to a dance since my marriage, two years ago, and I was quite excited at the prospect.

Of course, I dressed as my husband demanded—wearing a waist cut in a modest V in the front and back, and with my uncuried hair wound in a plain twist.

As I glanced in the mirror and noted my pale face I remembered how my husband hated powder and rouge, and comforted myself with the thought that in his eyes I would be lovely.

Yet when he was introduced to women wearing low gowns and unnatural curls, and with arms and necks glaringly white and cheeks suspiciously pink, he seemed to enjoy them. By contrasted the looks of my woman present with my own demure appearance.

THE OBVERSE

"I look dreadfully plain," I told my husband in an aside.

"You look very natural," he assured me. "You look as I want my wife to look."

"By the way, did you notice that woman who just came in? She's a stunner, isn't she? One of the fellows has promised to introduce me."

"I had to acknowledge that she was indeed "a stunner," yet I remarked to my husband that it was more art than nature that made her handsome.

"You're be spiteful!" Joseph admonished.

Later I tried one of the new waltzes with the husband of this "stunner." As it ended, my husband drew me to one side.

"I wish you would not dance with a man you scarcely know," he said. "I didn't like to see you with that chap's arm about you."

"But you were dancing with his wife," I retorted.

"That's quite different," he replied. "A man can do that kind of thing."

"And this woman means to do the same!" I exclaimed, angered by his tone and manner. "And when I come to another dance I shall dress as other woman do."

"Then," he said with a finality that made me know he meant it, "we will come to no more dances."

And, being his wife and a good woman, I had to submit.

Parted Friends

During a trial in Tipperary, Curran made a scathing attack on a land agent. Two days later an enraged gentleman burst into his bedroom in Dublin, before the counsellor was out of bed, and, flourishing a horsewhip savagely, said:

"Sir, I'm the gentleman you insulted in the court house in Clonmel, and in the presence of the whole county, and I'm here to thrash you roundly."

"What!" exclaimed Curran, indignantly. "You call yourself a gentleman, and yet you mean to strike a man when he's lying down?"

"No, badad," protested the agent, scorning to take a mean advantage of his enemy, and sitting down. "I'll just wait till you get out of bed, an' then I'll give it to you hot and heavy."

"Troth, if that's the way of it," said Curran, "I'll lie here till you change your mind."

And he turned over on his other side. The agent laughed and the counsellor laughed, and he'who came to whip stayed to dine, and the pair parted the best of friends.

How to Keep a Husband

Results of Study of Problem of Wife Desertion Set Forth by Dorothy Dix.

By DOROTHY DIX

THE Bureau of Public Welfare of Chicago has been making an exhaustive study of the problem of wife desertion. The result of their investigation shows that men are not apt to leave their wives if the wife is:

Big and strong and healthy.

If she is a good cook.

If she is sweet tempered, helpful, interested and affectionate.

If there are children in the family.

If the husband is a man earning a small salary.

On the other hand, husband desertion is an ever present peril to the wife who is:

Sickly and physically weak.

Is extravagant, shrewish and untidy.

Is ever critical and nagging.

If there are no children.

If the husband is a large money earner.

This report contains much food for thought for all women, because it squares with common experience and observation. Also, because it gives a tip to every wife who has sense enough to take one, on how to keep her husband happy and contented, and from wishing that he had the courage to duck and run.

For, believe me, dear ladies, not every man is a wife deserter who would like to be one, or who at various times has contemplated being one. So your danger is greater than you think, and it's up to you to take out a little Husband Insurance by taking to heart the garnered wisdom of this report on the why of wife desertion.

The first thing to know about it that strikes one is that it turns a searchlight on the exceeding humanness of husbands—which is a thing that the average woman never takes into consideration. She regards a husband as either a little tin god or a brute. She expects him to be either a super-man who will not be irritated by her own foibles and weaknesses, or notice whether the cooking is good or bad, or else she sets him down as a mean, grouchy tyrant who will find fault no matter what she does.

THE REAL TRUTH

All this is far and away from the truth. The average husband is just a plain, everyday sort of a man who wants things comfortable at home, who desires to be met when he comes home at night by a bright, cheerful, chummy wife, who isn't above handing him out plenty of soft soap and jollying him along, and who sets him down to a good dinner in a tidy house.

Given all these things, and especially when there is the strong tie of parenthood to bind a man and woman together, and the danger of a husband deserting his wife is almost negligible. That is what this report means, reduced to the terms of daily life.

Before marriage, beauty and grace and fine clothes may attract a man, but after marriage it is good nature, and sympathy, and cheerful companionship that holds him.

The man who is married to a woman who meets all the exigencies of life with fortitude and philosophy for his faults and failings, and who never throws his mistakes up to him, couldn't be dragged away from her side by wild horses. Nor do you ever hear of men asking for divorces from wives who are crackerjack cooks, and who make home a place of peace and rest.

The matrimonial ideal is expressed in Mrs. Hoffin's favorite motto, "Oh, Lord, let's be comfortable! Do!"

On the contrary, just as the woman who is amiable and thrifty and efficient, grapples her husband to her with hooks of steel, so the woman who is shrewish and nagging and wasteful and extravagant and a bad manager, is in danger of losing hers.

JUSTIFIED

For my part, I have never blamed the man who was married to a vixen, and whose whole life was spent to an accompaniment of recriminations and reproaches, from leaving her.

Also I have ever held that when a man sees a wife so lazy and trifling that she will not learn to cook and keep house decently, that the law should give him the right to dump her back on her parents, on the ground that they have palmed off an inferior grade of goods on him. He's been flim-flammed.

That more men do not do this, and that so many men stick by the bad matrimonial bargains they have made, and go on enduring a married life that is an earthly purgatory, when there are a dozen railroad trains out of the city and a room in Dublin, before the counsellor was out of bed, and, flourishing a horsewhip savagely, said:

Love's Variations

An army officer did not like the men under him to get married, and when one day a private came to him and asked his permission to wed, the officer, hoping to cool the man's ardor, told him to go away and come back a year from that day, and if he was then in the same mind permission would be given him to marry.

When the year had passed the soldier repeated his request. "But do you really still wish to marry?" asked the officer in surprise.

"Yes, sir, very much," answered "Tommy."

"Well, you may marry now," said the officer; "I never believed there was so much constancy in man or woman."

The soldier saluted and turned to leave the room. "Thank you, sir," he said, "but it isn't the same woman."

Taken Philosophically

A workman was sauntering homeward from his labors one pay day when he passed a quarry where some blasting was being done. Just as he passed a blast came and blew one of his hands off. The quarrymen quickly gathered about and proceeded with him while awaiting the ambulance.

"What a fearful thing!" cried one of them.

"Oh, well," answered Murphy, "it might be worse."

"How's that?" asked the man.

"It might ha' been the hand wid my wages in!"

local people are testifying in no uncertain terms to the great benefit received from Plant Juice in illness of long standing.

Recently Mrs. R. B. Burns, who lived at No. 502 Putnam street, Cambridge, for 20 years, and is a well-known lady, said:

"I have had stomach trouble, indigestion and dyspepsia for the last 25 years. I could not eat anything. My food would ferment, causing gas, bloating and heartburn. I also had headaches and dizzy spells and a hard lump in the pit of my stomach most of the time. I could not eat fruit or vegetables and lived on toast and sweet milk, and sometimes that pained me. I had insomnia at times and my limbs swelled up. I never got any real benefit from medicine until I took Plant Juice, which was recommended to me by a friend, who was cured by it. Now I have taken three bottles of it and I can truthfully say that it has worked wonders for me. I do not have any more nerves or pains, have a good appetite and enjoy all my meals. I sleep fine now and feel that I have made a new woman of me." I cheerfully recommending it to all my friends."

The Plant Juice Man is at the Liggett Drug Store, corner of Washington and Avon Streets, where he daily meets the local public and introduces and explains the merits of this remedy.—Advertisement.

To Acquire Curly Hair Over Night

(The Beauty Seeker)

There's good news, indeed, to the announcement that so simple a method as applying plain liquid silmerine to the hair will make it curly, wavy and easy to do over night. The hair dries in lovely ringlets and ripples that are quite natural in appearance, and there is nothing sticky, greasy or unpleasant about it. The liquid, which is of course quite harmless, also serves as a splendid dressing for the hair, keeping it delightfully fluffy and soft.

Only one will procure a few ounces of liquid silmerine from any druggist, and it will have enough to keep the hair in order for weeks. It should be applied at night with a clean tooth brush to the ends, using the hair will be very prettily waved, without having that burnt, lifeless look acquired by using a heated iron.—Advertisement.

Boston Expert Plans Wireless Telegraph Kite

Samuel F. Perkins, the Dorchester kite expert, who several years ago proved the feasibility of sending a man aloft on a kite string for observation purposes, has scored another hit.

He has returned from Plattsburg, N. Y., to his home, No. 14 Rockland avenue, Dorchester, with the news that the War Department has requested him to develop his so-called wireless telegraph kite.

At the Plattsburg camp experts of the army were astonished at the stunts performed by Perkins and his amazing lifting kites.

RUNNING FIGHT WITH BANDITS ON BORDER

By International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3.—Details of a running battle between American troops and Mexican bandits near Brownsville, Tex., last night reached the War Department today, in a report from General Funston. One American prisoner held by the Mexicans was recaptured by the American troops. His life was reported spared by the Mexicans because he was a German.

The following report from Colonel Bullard was forwarded to the War Department by General Funston:

"Detachments of Third Cavalry, Twelfth Cavalry and Twenty-sixth Infantry drove into brush Mexican bandits who burned bridge last night at a point about seven miles south of San Benito and are making all arrangements to take up pursuit tomorrow morning. Lieutenant Palmer, Twenty-sixth Infantry, with half of Company B, had running fight with the enemy this afternoon, killing one, wounding one and recapturing one American prisoner. No casualties among soldiers. When the skirmish began the bandits immediately killed two white prisoners, Donaldson and Smith."

General Funston added to the report as follows:

"Private dispatches from Brownsville report that raiders spared the recaptured American prisoner because captors were told he was a German."

Secretary of State Lansing today decided to answer the request of General Carranza as to whether he and the Latin-American envoys were acting with the knowledge of their governments when they addressed their recent peace appeal to him. Secretary Lansing's reply will go forth soon, he said today, and it will tell Carranza that most certainly the various governments interested knew of the appeals their envoys were sending to the various Mexican leaders. The Secretary will answer for the various South American envoys as well as for himself.

MRS. ARTHUR C. WALDEN, Brockton telephone operator, who eloped over a month ago.

BROCKTON, Sept. 3.—A "whisper over the wire" at the Brockton Telephone Exchange revealed the fact that Miss Theresa N. Fogarty, eighteen, of No. 31 Ellsworth avenue, one of the most popular girls in the office, eloped with Arthur C. Walden, twenty-two, of No. 69 Park road, nearly a month ago.

Since August 6, when the secret wedding was performed in Lynn, nobody but the parents of the young couple have known of the elopement. Even the parents did not know it until after the young couple had been married.

The secret leaked out when one of the 'phone operators noticed a ring on the girl's finger. She finally gained a confession from the bride. Then the news was "flashed over the wire," and today both the bride and groom are receiving congratulations.

The wedding was solemnized during Mrs. Walden's vacation from her duties as toll operator and assistant supervisor at the Brockton Telephone Exchange.

Mrs. Walden has a wide circle of friends and for years has been a leader in the various social activities of the young women at the exchange.

Mr. Walden is a confectioner, the son of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Walden.

500 AMERICAN BOYS RELEASED FROM ARMIES

By International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3.—Five hundred American boys who have run away from home to fight on European battlefields have obtained their release as the result of intervention by American diplomats since the war began.

This was announced at the State Department today, where it also was stated that in almost every case the boys had deceived the British authorities regarding age and nationality.

Standardized rules have had to be adopted to get these boys out of the military service. When a demand is made upon the State Department by parents whose sons have enlisted—most of them went in Canadian regiments—proof is demanded that the soldier is a minor and sufficient money must be deposited with the department to bring the boy home. Only those under twenty-one can be brought back as this country has no authority to interfere with those above that age.

In the office of Third Assistant Secretary of State Phillips are the records of many of these cases. One of the most romantic is that of Peter Dougall, seventeen, of Lambert, Minn. Not only did he run away and twice enlist, but he was blown up with the Arabic when that White Star liner was sunk. He is now en route back to his country under surveillance.

Two fifteen-year-old lads named Walsh from Boston enlisted in Canada.

They were turned loose in London at the request of Ambassador Page. Escaping from an embassy attache, they slipped out to Salisbury Plain and re-enlisted, but again were released and sent back to their parents. These cases are in the main typical of all of the others on file.

FIVE MEN DIE IN THE CHAIR AT SING SING

By the International News Service.

OSSINING, N. Y., Sept. 3.—Five murderers in the early dawn of today were put to death in the electric chair at Sing Sing prison. The wholesale electrocution was put through in quick time and was without especial incident.

One of them, Lewis Rich of Montgomery, convicted of the murder of John Harrett of Palatine, lived in hope in the death house until the last minute.

A mysterious telephone call to Father Cashin, chaplain of the prison, caused an appeal to be made to Governor Whitman at midnight to give the doomed man a reprieve. The effort was unavailing.

Besides Rich, the men executed were Antonio Salemme of Monroe County, William Perry of New York, Pasquale Vendette of Kings County and Thomas Tarpey of Kings County.

The first to die was Salemme. He was electrocuted a few minutes after 5 o'clock and the fifth man was dead shortly after 6 o'clock.

Three contacts of the current were necessary to kill Salemme and the same was true of Vendetta, the second man. Roach was third, and he delayed his execution long enough to make a final statement that he was innocent. Tarpey was next and Perry was the last to die.

After an investigation it was found out that Deputy Sheriff E. P. Van Wie of Canajoharie sent the telephone message to Father Cashin. It asked that Roach be induced to confess. Van Wie made a trip to Albany to see the Governor, and the officials of the prison also communicated with the executive, but at midnight Governor Whitman refused to interfere with the execution of Roach.

Roach and Perry, a negro, each left a letter, thanking the prison authorities. Neither referred to his crime, but wrote about religious subjects.

IRENE FENWICK, who comes to Tremont Monday in "The Song of Songs."

BOSTON TO SEE MISS FENWICK IN NEW HIT

Irene Fenwick, the young heroine of "The Song of Songs," which comes to the Tremont Monday, began her stage career in musical comedy as a chorus girl in "Peggy From Paris." But Miss Fenwick didn't want to remain a chorus girl. She had higher aspirations. So she wrote to Charles Frohman, who was then in London, telling him all about her ambitions. Mr. Frohman, who had heard about her through other sources, answered that he would see her on his return.

But she just couldn't and wouldn't wait. So she took the next steamer for England, hunted up Mr. Frohman and calmly informed that astute manager that she had run across "just to talk things over." Mr. Frohman was selecting a cast for F. Anstey's "The Brass Bottle," so he gave her the role of Sylvia Fairoye to study on the return voyage. On her arrival here Miss Fenwick—then Miss Frizelle—was told to report for rehearsals, and incidentally informed that her name thereafter would be Fenwick.

"But why?" inquired Miss Fenwick quite naturally.

"Because," answered Mr. Frohman's representative, "Frizelle is too flippant."

"Maybe," replied Miss Fenwick, "but it's my very, very own."

"Well, we've left you the Irene," was the answer.

And since then it's been Irene Fenwick, and as such she made a distinct hit in "The Brass Bottle."

From that time Miss Fenwick added steadily to her artistic reputation, and has made the most sensational hit of her career as Lily Kardos in "The Song of Songns."

Film Mermaid Tossed on Rocks by Sea Wave

GLOUCESTER, Sept. 3.—A huge wave swept Mary Fuller, motion picture actress, from a rock at Brazer Cover here, lifted her high on its crest and tossed her back on the rock without injuring the silken garment in which she was posing as a mermaid.

Her companion, Robert Hill, dressed in oilskins and rubber boots, was less fortunate, and the wave swept him out into deep water, buffeting him so that physicians ordered him to bed.

Miss Fuller, undaunted by her ride on the wave, decided to continue the scene. Another play fisherman was secured. The surf knocked him down.

U. S. 'ROOKIES' AWAIT NIGHT ATTACK

ALTONA, N. Y., Sept. 3.—The citizen war students slept all night ready to spring to arms and defend their ammunition train if called to repel a night attack.

The provisional regiment with the Third and Thirtieth Infantry successfully convoyed the train on a retreat here from Perry's Mills without having their guards penetrated by ten troops of cavalry representing the Reds.

The men covered twelve miles of dirt road ankle deep in powdery, choking dust in about four hours under a blazing hot sun. The pace set to keep up with the train and escape the Reds was so fast that when Woods Falls, two miles north of here, was reached and the bridge over the Big Chazy River crossed, many fainted in the ranks from the strain of the march.

Whenever a man fell another was ordered to fall out and take care of him until the arrival of the hospital ambulance while the column pressed on in the heat and dust. None was seriously affected and all are ready for the march today.

When the regiment arrived at camp on a hill here they learned that the only place to bathe lay a mile and a quarter away over the hills. Most of the men were content to lie down after pitching tents.

With the exception of a few patrols none of the citizen soldiers got any chance to fire at the Reds today, so there will be plenty of ammunition for today's maneuver, when a big action is expected.

SOUTH BOSTON CARNIVAL IN FULL SWING

South Boston's four-day carnival was resumed today at Marine Park.

The second day is scheduled to open with a band concert at 2 o'clock. An hour later races will be held on the Strandway boulevard and at 4 o'clock swimming races for boys will take place at the Head House Beach.

Chairman William N. Cronin will deliver a speech in front of the Head House at 5. After his speech prizes will be awarded the winners in the events of the day.

The second production of the gigantic pageant will be given at Marine Park tonight.

Over 100,000 persons attended the opening of the carnival and a large crowd is expected today.

1,500 IN PAGEANT.

The pageant, "At the End of the Rainbow," presented by 1,500 South Boston young men and women, on a stage built among the trees, attracted an audience that crowded the open-air amphitheatre.

Mayor and Mrs. Curley, with the Mayor's aides, Major Tracey and Major Dunn, attended the pageant.

Merry-go-rounds and all sorts of aerial amusement devices drew thousands of children to the Midway along the beach. Several bands gave concerts and furnished music for dancing at the pavilions.

The pageant was the main attraction. Ray W. Averill wrote the book and music and directed the production.

Joseph Smith, a Boston tenor, plays the part of Basil, a homeless waif left in the keeping of a servant of the Duke of Angomar. Joseph O'Neil plays the part of Godfrey, the only person that knows the waif's identity. Basil meets Princess Marian in the house of her father, emperor of the Island of Dreams. Miss Marian White takes the part of the princess and John J. Murphy, a clerk in the Mayor's office, is seen as the emperor.

200 FAIRIES DANCE.

More than 200 small girls represent fairies in the dream dance in a dell where Basil falls asleep. The marraces were disposed of first on Gardner Way under the direction of Charles Gardner. The swimming races were held off the southerly side of the Head House.

Other characters in the performance are Cedric, played by Senator William J. Sullivan; Iago, a Nubian attendant to the princess, Joseph F. Good; Audrey, an accomplice of Godfrey, Frank Crowley; Armand, captain of the guard, Fred Carroll; Kathleen, maid-in-waiting to the princess, Lillian M. Gorman.

The carnival was officially opened by Park and Recreation Commissioner John H. Dillon, who represented the Mayor.

GIRLS WIN CONTESTS.

Following his remarks, the contests, in which girls were the only participants, were held. The running race of the waif and the princess brings on to the stage all the 1,500 members of the cast. The three acts are elaborately staged.

Mayor Curley distributed the prizes to the winners, paying a dainty compliment to each little girl as she stepped forward to receive the medal she had won.

The winners were:

Potato race, seniors—Won by Emma O'Connell, Emma Hilton second.
Potato race, juniors—Won by Margaret Mahoney, Emily Murphy second.
Fifty-yard dash, seniors—Won by Gertrude McKay, Ruth Barron second.
One hundred-yard dash, seniors—Won by Gertrude McKay, Margaret Tobin second.

BOSTON SCHOOL CHANGES TOLD BY DR. DYER

Boston schools will open September 8, with increased attendance and many improvements.

The High School of Commerce on the Fenway will have 1,800 pupils. The overflow at the Dorchester High School will be accommodated in the Sarah J. Baker School, Roxbury. This school can only accommodate 1,000, while the number seeking entrance is 2,500.

Industrial courses at Hyde Park in conjunction with the local manufactories, have proved a big success, according to Superintendent Dr. F. B. Dyer. There it is half work and half study. Boys work part of the time at school and then give the rest of the time to the manufactories.

NORMAL SCHOOL BETTERED.

"This is a highly practical education and very economical," claims Dr. Dyer.

"We have also made revised courses of study in the Normal School. We have increased the kindegarten course from one year to three and brought it into closer touch with demands of the elementary schools. Dr. Corlin Scott, who has held a position on Educational Psychology, will retire and take a position at Mt. Holyoke College. He will be greatly missed here.

"The Industrial School for Boys at Roxbury will be a great addition to our equipment. At present it is lodged in very cramped quarters on Brimmer street. We shall have to tide over the year by taking space in the Franklin Union building.

"The art course at the Museum of Art School will have thirty of our pupils. We have been offered thirty scholarships there. The training in this art school is the best in the country. The young mind given to art will here find special advantages which could not be given it in the curriculum of study prescribed by the public schools.

COURSES IMPROVED.

"Music will have more attention and studies in that branch of knowledge will be given credits in the high school course.

"We will give special advantages to those who desire to train for high school teachers. Some of these are graduates of colleges, but in taking places in our high schools we will give them special opportunities to learn this branch of teaching with a small salary at first, until they are fully qualified.

"In the elementary schools we are now providing such courses to anticipate the work of high schools.

"Pre-vocational centres will be established in Charlestown, South Boston, Roxbury and Jamaica Plain.

"The backward scholars, among whom are to be classed the stammerers, we notice a marked improvement. Eighty-five per cent. of these are restored. There are six centres for these schools. Schools providing for this type are found on Rutland street for girls and in the George T. Angell School, Roxbury.

Champ Clark Saves a Negro from Lynchers

BOWLING GREEN, Mo., Sept. 3.—Harrison Rose, negro slayer of Bud Davidson of Clarksville, Mo., a white farmer, probably owes the fact that he is alive to Speaker Champ Clark's eloquence.

Aroused from his bed by the chugging of six motor cars loaded with farmers from Clarksville, who were intent upon hanging the negro, Clark, after hailing the crowd, ran among them and exhorted the members to let the law take its course. There were murmurs against the interference, but the Speaker's word prevailed and the mob dispersed.

Rose is in jail here. He is alleged to have killed Davidson with a pitchfork in a quarrel while both were employed in a threshing crew.

MOTOR NOTES

By J. C. KERRISON.

In the death of S. T. Davis, president of the Locomobile Company of America, which occurred at his home in Fairfield, Ct., on Wednesday, the industry loses one of its pioneers. Mr. Davis has long been prominently identified with the motor industry. He assumed the presidency and active management of the company when it was organized in 1897.

He was a pioneer in all that the term implies, and it is to such men as he that the industry owes a debt of gratitude. Personally he was a man of charming disposition and great executive ability, a man who performed as well as attracted, and one held in the highest esteem by everyone with whom he came in contact.

Thomas Wetzel and Charlie Hall, of the Wetzel-Hall Company of Detroit and New York, spent yesterday in Boston en route home from the recent meeting of the Question Club at New London. Both men found considerable pleasure in visiting their old-time friends now located in Boston, such as J. W. Bowman, J. H. Johnson and Harry Fosdick.

Early today quite a number of Boston motor dealers started off on a week end tour. Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Maguire left for Maplewood, in a Pierce, as did Mr. and Mrs. J. H. MacAlman in a Stearns-Knight and Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Johnson in a Buick.

BIG U. S. NAVAL FORCE LANDED AT HAITI

CAPE HAITIEN, Haiti, Sept. 3.—A large force of marines and sailors were landed by the U. S. cruiser Tennessee today. Artillery was also taken ashore, indicating that the American forces are preparing to move into the interior to force the Haitien rebels there to lay down their arms.

All members of the sanitary corps brought here by the Tennessee were landed with the sailors and marines. It is expected the march into the interior will begin at once. An aeroplane for scout service is being assembled. That the Americans will meet with determined resistance in the interior is shown by the activities of the rebels. They are digging trenches a few miles from Cape Haitien and have barricaded all roads leading from the city.

Autoist Is Fined $50 on Intoxication Charge in Quincy

Arthur T. Caldwell of Brockton, who was arrested at Milton, August 24, by the Metropolitan Park police, was found guilty on the charge of operating an automobile on the Blue Hill Parkway while under the influence of liquor, in the Quincy District Court. Judge Albert E. Avery fined him $50. He appealed.

James T. Early, a companion, was fined $10 for being intoxicated.

Judge Avery, in imposing the fine, said that it was not necessary for a man to be drunk to be charged with driving while under the influence of liquor, and that he was satisfied that at the time of his arrest Caldwell was intoxicated.

Every Man Take Notice!

YOU are put in your wife's place—you are treated as you (if you are an ordinary human husband) treat her—you are given a taste of every wife's every-day medicine in Mrs. Van de Water's story, "The Yoke of Dependence," in the September issue of the American Sunday Magazine. You won't like it.

Margaret Foster was petty—blind—actually, though unconsciously, heartless. The unfairness—the bitter, and all the more bitter because loving, humiliations she heaped upon her husband will make you revolt. You will agree that Walter did just the right thing when he left her.

And then, you will suddenly see why Mrs. Van de Water wrote this story just as she did—you will see that all the unnaturalness comes from the fact that Margaret Foster acts just like the average man acts. And you won't like that—but it will make you think.

Sidelights on Sports

By RIGHT FIELD.

WITH this series with the Robins to complete, and let's all be good enough fellows to forget about yesterday's mad massacre, the Braves have set up a record for a home stay that is worth bringing out to view for any club around the circuit to shoot at. Opening the new park August 18, the Tribesmen have met all four of their Western rivals and had one set-to with the Robins and annexed eleven of their fifteen combats.

THE Cardinals, Cubs and Reds defeated the Braves once each, while the Pirates failed to earn brackets. Yes, the Robins won the first brush.

UP to yesterday four runs had been the most any visiting member had piled up. Then, the Stallings band has blanked the foe seven times. The Braves have scored forty-seven runs to the enemy's twenty-eight, and ten of 'em came yesterday.

NOW that the twenty-one player limit has been lifted in the National League, we shall see just what prospects the different managers will trot out in the closing days. John Hummel was off the Robins for a day and on again the next, so that Rube Marquard could go in and buri a couple of innings for the anxious Wilbert Robinson.

IF any other club had James, Nehf, Snodgrass and Compton coming to it within a brief space they would probably set up a big hue and cry about what they were going to do. When Southpaw Nehf gets the weakness of the National League batsmen all catalogued to his satisfaction, he bids fair to make the majority of them look foolish. He has done some very tidy work against them already on the basis of what "Hank" Gowdy and "Moose" Whaling have been able to tip him.

NEHF looks like a star this year, and next year should prove a comet, or something just as brilliant, if there is anything.

WHEN Lee Fohl brings his Indians to Fenway Park double-headers will be staged on each of the three days. Last time the Indians were here the rain put pastiming into the discard, and we will get three bargain days hand-running this time.

THE White Sox are down for one double bill and the Macks for two when they come visiting.

RESUME BATTLE FOR 2D POSITION

By RIGHT FIELD.

That battle between the Braves and Robins over second place isn't off as a result of the sad doings of the first clash of the series, but is on again today with more fury than ever.

The Braves are stinging under the lash of two defeats in a row, one by the Reds and one by their arch enemies, the Robins, and if they don't get today's game and tomorrow's there will be a surprised lot of "fans" in the Eastern counties of the old Bay State.

When the Braves unleash their fury on the foe this afternoon it will be worth going miles to see. The Tribesmen seemed to be down a bit too fine in the first clash, and to be some nervous, owing to the great importance of the encounter. But they are one of the best little teams in the business in right-about-facing when a new day dawns and getting right back at the hostiles.

RUDOLPH MAY WORK.

It seems to be "Nifty" Nehf's turn to pitch today and Arthur's left-handed offerings, if the puzzle the Robins as much as they have puzzled the other teams since Stallings discovered him, may quite likely prove to be just the prescription.

There is a possibility that Rudolph may be sent back in today, just to prove to the Brooklyns that the combination of hits, errors and passes that marked "Little Dick's" debut in the series will not happen again.

Jess Barnes, who finished the lost hope battle yesterday in quite business-like style, is an outside choice to labor again this p. m.

Wilbert Robinson, the hustling manager who is having a wonderful year with the Robins, seems mighty proud of his pitchers. He had the whole nine on parade during the opener.

Robby crossed the talent by not sending "Wheezer" Dell after the first encounter, so we may pretty safely count on seeing this clever youngster today.

"Iron Man" Coombs, a .600 performer, has only rested since Tuesday, but he might be sent into the fray, although it is about time to hear from "Nap" Rucker, who hasn't been worked for the regulation five days now.

The Braves, having piled up enough hobbles—six to be precise—to last them a couple of weeks, should be back in old-time form today. It is not probable the Robins will get spotted any runs in this afternoon's pastiming.

"FANS" NEED NOT WORRY.

The Tribesmen are right in the fight, even if they did slip up two days running, something that hasn't happened since the last road trip. They have the coming road trip to think of now and will be busy today and tomorrow getting things lined up for a successful campaign.

Nothing will give the proper zest to this coming expedition around the circuit like a couple of farewell victories on the home stamping ground, and that is just what Stallings will send his willing workers out after.

Wilbert Robinson, one-time side kick of J. J. McGraw, has banded together a pretty fine supporting outfit, but folks hereabouts won't begin shouting "The pennant for the Robins" just because Our Boys stumbled once before them.

The way the Braves feel now, the Robins will be lucky if they ever see six runs again during all the rest of their stay.

Mr. Mack Denies Yankees Are to Acquire Baker

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 2.—"I'm getting tired," states Connie Mack, manager of the Athletics, "of denying silly fakes about J. Franklin Baker. President Ruppert has never attempted to buy Baker's release, neither did he send Ban Johnson to intercede for him. In our conferences Wednesday the name of Baker wasn't mentioned once. Isn't that enough?"

Mack adds that he is absolutely not kidding when he enters this emphatic denial.

Locally the rumor will not down but that J. Franklin is to land over in New York, as the new owners of the Yankees are up in arms over the way Boston, Detroit and Chicago, the American League's Big Three, are acquiring all the stars.

Just the same, Mack states there's nothing doing in the reported Baker sale.

Griff Gets Fed Jumper.

BROOKLYN, Sept. 2.—First Baseman Sammy Mayer, who jumped the Kansas City (American Association) club for the Brookfeds several weeks ago, but was restrained by a court order from playing with the local club, has ducked away to join the Washington (American League) club.

SOX FIND IT HARD TO SHAKE TIGERS

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 2.—We desire to come right back with our forecast of twenty-four hours ago, to wit: Nothing but equally weather will keep the Red Sox from registering their daily victory over the Jake Mack entrant this afternoon. Victory No. 2 came as prescribed yesterday. Triumph No. 3 cannot miss fire unless the unexpected happens with a tremendous vengeance.

As a result of going over yesterday the Red Sox increased their advantage over the Athletics to 4½ games. So, this is positively going to be one year "Connie" Mack is not going to cause Boston fandom any anguish. That's a positive pipe.

However, Mr. Carrigan, who is cocksure his club is going to remain on top, hence come through and land the championship, is pulling for the Tigers to lose an occasional game.

It is now only necessary for the Red Sox to win nineteen of their remaining thirty-five contests in order to attain the century in the winning line. The club is really bent upon eclipsing the American League's mark of 103 victories, and, doped on their work here, will accomplish that trick, sure.

It's some drive the Tigers are making the Red Sox pull. The boys have just got through banging 23 out of their last 27 games and still they cannot get over a length and one-half ahead of the clan of Jennings. Carrigan and all the players were confident that the White Sox were going to grab a game or two from the Tigers in the three-game series between the two clubs that came to a close yesterday. But Tyrus, Samuel & Co. negotiated a clean sweep.

For the next ten days or so the Tigers bid fair banging a victory daily. So the Red Sox must keep up their gallant work. Barring two dates in Chicago next week—and the White Sox apparently cannot twist the Tiger's tail—the Michiganders will be having it out with St. Louis and Cleveland.

"THE RABBIT'S" COLUMN By Walter J. Maranville HORTSTOP OF THE BRAVES

THIS man Toney of the Cincinnati Reds is going to cut quite a figure in the National League race. This statement may seem foolish on the face of it, but after I do a little explaining I am convinced that my reader will think differently.

TONEY is a big man. He is considered just about the strongest in the big leagues. He can stand a lot of work. Herzog knows this and gives him plenty to do. But that is not all. Toney is a great pitcher. He's got oodles of speed and is a hard man to hit. He, uses the sidearm delivery with good effect. Combine strength, speed and curves with pitching ability and you have a pretty good combination.

* * *

NOW here's the point. Herzog is crazy to win ball games and doesn't hesitate to say so. He doesn't care how he wins them as long as he wins them. This is where Toney's massive frame is brought into play. Knowing that Toney is strong and can stand a lot of work, Herzog used him twice in every other series. Fred generally pitches the opening and closing games of one series, the second or third of next, and then goes back to first and last system on the third set of contests.

* * *

BY following this plan, Herzog gets good pitching in practically half of every series, as Toney seldom falters. And, what's more, he generally cleans up. I don't know whether or not Herzog has used this system since he got hold of Toney, but I do know that he is going to work it from now out, if everything goes right.

* * *

WHEN the Phillies, Dodgers and Braves next strike Cincinnati they probably will be asked to face Toney in two shows. If Fred beats any member of the trio in both starts, it's going to put quite a crimp in their pennant chances.

* * *

TONEY made two starts against us in the series we just finished with the Reds. We managed to beat him by a 2-0 score the first time, but he came back strong in the other encounter and let us down with one hit and nary a run. That's pitching. So keep your eye on Mr. Toney from now out.

* * *

THE Robins got the jump on us, but we aren't discouraged in the least. It was an off day for Rudolph. Every pitcher has his good days and his bad days. So the "fans" needn't worry. Dick will come back and I wouldn't be surprised if he went back against the Robins today. By the way, it is fellows in the field were worse than he was. Say, we were away off, but we've got that bad one out of our system.

Hist to Johnston's Line of Gay Lingo

NEW YORK, Sept. 2.—The happiest man in town is Jimmy Johnston. The occasion of Jim's mirth is the fact that Ted Lewis got Referee Haley's decision over Jack Britton at Boston.

"I am a young fellow trying to get along," states Johnston, "and this Mr. Dan Morgan tried to rub the whole Atlas show. I let him have his own referee. I changed Lewis' gloves, I rewound the tape on Ted's hands, I consented to the removal of the rubber protector on his teeth, in fact, I was so generous that I gave poor Danny everything but the decision. Now I have the king of the lightweights under my wing."

By MISS MOLLA BJURSTEDT, World's Foremost Woman Tennis Player.

FOREST HILLS, Sept. 3.—Karl H. Behr, R. Norris Williams 2nd and Maurice E. McLaughlin, the three men among whom the title will be settled, came through the third round of the National Tennis Tournament at the West Side Club with victories, but without adding particularly to their reputations.

The quality of their tennis was about in the order named. Each lost a set and each made numerous errors. It was an off day for the ranking men, although their respective opponents, Robert Leroy, Leonard Beekman and W. Morrill, all played with cleverness.

The surprise of the day was the easy victory of Theodore Roosevelt Pell over Watson M. Washburn. Washburn played a splendid game against George M. Chuch Wednesday, and he defeated Pell a fortnight ago at Southampton, but yesterday Pell went through in straight sets, 6—4, 6—4, 6—2.

WASHBURN SEEMS TIRED.

Washburn seemed somewhat tired. Pell, however, played better tennis; tennis which the Harvard man entirely failed to solve. Washburn had the idea that it was only necessary to give Pell plenty of easy balls and Pell would drive them out of, or into net. Pell happened to be right on his plans and instead of driving for errors, drove for points.

McLoughlin, in his match with Leonard Beekman, clearly demonstrated that the ground strokes are not his strongholds. He was effective at the net, but he conserved his strength and seldom took the net except when no other play was possible.

The service was also wild and the second ball seldom had the pace. On the whole the ex-champion's play smacked of preoccupation. His mind did not seem to be on the game.

WILLIAMS GROWS CARELESS.

Williams, just to keep up the record of his two brilliant competitors, dropped a set to Hall. After having won two sets, Williams thought he had the game in hand and became so careless that Hall took four games in a row.

Try as he might, Williams could not come back. Hall repeatedly passed him, while the percentage of first serves was very high. Hall was careful and Williams careless. The latter missed the easiest kind of shots and returned the hard ones.

LINART, WILEY AND SERES IN BIG RACE

A three-cornered thirty-mile motor-paced match race between Victor Linart, the world's champion, George Wiley and George Seres has been arranged for the Revere Beach cycle track tomorrow night.

Another feature on this card will be the Brother Tandem Race, the first of its kind ever listed for the seaside saucer. The competitors will be the Turvilles of Revere, the Connollys of Everett and the Rollins, also of Everett. The amateur and "prox" will be ran off as usual.

While everybody is satisfied with the outcome of the championship race, the closeness of the affair created a general feeling for another contest between Linart, Wiley and Seres.

Beaten by only a half-wheel length in that great 62½-mile struggle, Wiley had nothing but praise for his conqueror, Linart. The game little American champion declared today that the Belgian justly deserved the spoils.

Wiley was not the only one who fought a great battle, however, for Seres, too, was in the meet of everything and had his opponents worried on many occasions.

The Frenchman did some clever execution in the early miles and for this reason will bear close watching in the shorter race tomorrow night.

Hills Grove Races Draw Banner Crowd

PROVIDENCE, Sept. 3.—Another big crowd was in attendance at the Short Ship races at Hills Grove. Coming from behind Asa Hal annexed first money in the 2:20 pace by winning the last three heats.

Montbert, the favorite, placed the 2:22 trot to his credit in straight heats.

Wills' Pluggers Look for M'Vea to Draw Surprise

Harry Wills, the New Orleans colored heavyweight, who meets Sam McVea, the big black from California, who has looked extremely good in all his recent bouts in Boston, at the Atlas A. A. next Tuesday night, only recently came into prominence, but is striding to the fore at such a rapid gait that he bids fair giving a good account of himself against the conqueror of Sam Langford.

Since placing himself under the management of folks who know how to develop and bring out the fine points in a boxer, Wills has shown steady improvement. While not as massive as McVea, Wills has an essential advantage to reach, which to a boxer who knows how to make use of, is one of the best assets he could have.

Wills is said to be at home at long or short range boxing and to be the possessor of a stiff punch.

SOUND BODIES

By JULIAN HAWTHORNE

This is the forty-first of a series of articles on "Sound Bodies" written exclusively for the Boston AMERICAN by Julian Hawthorne. These articles will be continued in the AMERICAN on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.

Back to the Days of Infancy.

Get over on your back once more, and prepare yourself to revert to the days of your infancy. You have already been bested by the gorge and the caterpillar, and now the baby is going to show you how far you have fallen from the efficiency of those early days when you yourself wore napkins and sucked your thumbs.

The baby does this exercise spontaneously, and with no apparent effort. If you put it on its back, and turn away for a moment, you will find it, when you turn back, resting easily in the posture which you are now about to assume—or to try to. You may say that the baby's legs are smaller and lighter than yours; but on the other hand, it is only a baby, whose athletic prowess you had probably fancied to be negligible. In truth, a baby, for its size and experience, is a wonderfully strong creature.

Let your arms lie down by your sides; straighten your knees. Keep your head and shoulders flat on the mattress from start to finish. Have your hands palms down.

Now lift up your legs, slowly, till they are at right angles with the body. Do not let the knees bend, if you can possibly avoid it. If you have practised the bending-down exercise faithfully, you will find this less difficult.

But you must go farther, if you aspire to come anywhere near the baby.

Impel your legs still further forward, past the perpendicular, and onward, till your toes touch the wall behind you—against which, if you have followed directions, the end of the mattress rests. In order to accomplish this, you will have to raise the lower part of the back off the mattress, till you are resting on your shoulders. Don't stop yet, but, aiding the movement by pressing the palms of your hands against the mattress at your sides, get up higher yet, till you feel as if you were supported on the back of the neck. Let the toes ascend up along the wall, till at last you are pretty near upside down. Come back again gently and resume your recumbent posture. Then, up again, as near twenty times as you can make it.

This exercise is good not only for the muscles which it brings into play—the abdominals, the small muscles and sinews at the front junction of the thighs with the body—but even more on account of the upside-down position, which reverses the habitual posture of the interior organs; so that instead of, being any longer pulled downward by gravitation, they are now pulled upward toward the diaphragm. The hygienic effect is invaluable. The baby is indifferent as to which end of it is uppermost, and the attacks upon it of gravitation are parried accordingly; boys, too, are more or less on their heads much of the time, and show the benefits of it; but we get so staid and dignified as we grow older, that we deem it indecorous to reverse ourselves, and gravitation does his evil work upon us undisturbed. If we would condescend to stand on our heads only five minutes daily, we would live longer and enjoy life more. Let us take example by the baby and begin.

DETROIT, Sept. 3.—Robert Gardner of Chicago, who won the United States title in 1909, will meet Maxwell Marston, Baltusrol, today in the upper half of the semi-finals for the National championship over the Detroit Country Club links, while in the lower half it will be John G. Anderson, Siwanoy Club, Mt. Vernon, N. Y., against Sherrill Sherman, Yahnundass Club, Utica, N. Y.

Gardner formerly was on the Yale team. Marston is the present New Jersey champion and in 1913 held the Eastern Intercholastic title, but never before went far down in the National. Anderson formerly was a Boston resident, where he captured the Bay State title. Two years ago he was runner-up on Jerome Travers in the National at Garden City, and in June proved runner-up to Walter Travis in the Metropolitan. Sherman has figured only in home events. Gardner is favorite for the title.

SAWYER A LOSER.

A heart-breaker for Chicago, coming as the sequel to the Evans-Sawyer match Tuesday, was the latter's defeat by Robert Gardner.

Sawyer has been playing at the top of his game too long, for until yesterday his golf has been the most consistent displayed in the tournament, but he had apparently reached the limit and his third round ended in disaster.

On the other hand, Gardner was playing a fine game, his approaching and putting being notably good. Sawyer won but one hole in the morning round, the eleventh, when Gardner took three puts. Sawyer was out in 40 and in in 40, the poorest score he has made in Detroit, while Gardner went out in 35 and came back in 40.

The match between Howard Lee, the local man, and Max Marston, the victor over Travers, was close and exciting, with many astonishing features. At the sixteenth hole Marston drove out to the corner, but as the club owns the ground it was decided that it was out of bounds, and the wide drive won the hole instead of losing it.

At the twelfth Marston was four down, but he won the match on the thirty-eighth hole. Travers acted as Marston's caddy.

STANDISH LETS DOWN.

The letdown in Standish's golf was indeed remarkable, but even so that he was only defeated on the very last hole. This was a great disappointment to Standish, for after dispensing of a National champion he was expecting little trouble with Sherrill Sherman.

Whitney and Anderson played good golf, the Southerner having the worst of it and losing, 3 and 2.

Altogether the day was disappointing from a Western and Southern standpoint, as all our hopes are now centred in Robert Gardner. He is a good, dependable golfer, but three against one is fearful odds.

Myopia First Score Easily.

HAMILTON, Sept. 3.—Myopia First, playing in championship form, had an easy time with Myopia Third in the play for the Myopia Cup. The score was 73 to 5¼ goals. Charles G. Rice and Shaw McKeran played sensational polo.

LODGE RENEWS CHARGE THAT U. S. NAVY IS UNPREPARED

United States Senator Henry Cabot Lodge has replied to Secretary of the Navy Daniels, repeating and defending the Senator's previous criticisms of the navy.

Senator Lodge denies any intention of making party capital out of his charges.

He says he puts on no party the blame for lack of preparedness.

QUOTES DANIEL'S REPORT.

My Dear Mr. Secretary:

I have received your letter of August 29, for which I am much thankful. I certainly should never knowingly misquote or misrepresent you in any way, and if I have done so I much regret it. On the first page of the Boston Herald of Tuesday morning, Aug. 25, appeared this statement:

"The United States Navy is ready to meet any emergency, the Secretary of the Navy told a Herald reporter in an interview at the Boston Navy Yard shortly after noon."

Substantially the same statement appeared in the Boston Globe. You were in Boston on that day and the next, and on Wednesday you made a speech on board ship, which I read with much interest, but you did not, so far as I saw, contradict the statement of Tuesday or call it to it and I therefore, not unnaturally, I think, supposed that the report in the Herald—where the reports are usually very accurate —gave correctly what you had said. This supposition does not seem to me forced, because in your annual report of last year you said, under the heading "Proof of the Preparedness of the Navy" (referring to Mexico): "It showed the country that the navy is at all times ready. It lives in a state of preparedness."

This caused me to accept without question the statement attributed to you by the Herald reporter. I am very glad to learn that you did not say that the navy was ready for any emergency, or anything from which it could be inferred, and that you agree with me that the navy is not at this moment ready for any emergency.

NOT FOR PARTY CAPITAL.

So far as making party capital out of it is concerned, I assure you that nothing is further from my thoughts. Speaking in the Senate last January, I said in the most explicit terms that no one party was to blame for the condition of the navy, and that no one party deserved the credit for anything valuable that had been done, and that the burden of responsibility for the present condition rested chiefly on Congress for many years past. The only public criticism that I have made of the present administration in regard to the navy was that last year, when the condition of the times demanded great naval increases the administration put the whole matter aside, as a subject for academic discussion, and did not urge them. In this way I have said that a whole year was wasted that was of the very greatest importance. This criticism, I confess, seems to me to be a good one.

You compare the authorizations of the first two years of the Wilson administration favorable with the last two years of the Taft administration. It is quite true that the Sixty-third Congress did much better in authorizations for the navy than the Sixty-second Congress in the last two years, particularly unwilling to make any proper appropriations for the navy. It treated the navy worse than any House I have ever known. I do not think, however, that anything is to be gained by comparing one Democratic House with another Democratic House, or Democratic control with Republican control of the appropriations. That which is needed is to know the needs of the navy now and then build it up as orderly as possible. We made a good appropriation for submarines last Winter, but you will remember that it was done through action of the Senate, which doubled what was recommended as well as the authorizations of the House in that direction.

I agree with you fully that the facts ought to be known in regard to the navy, and it is just that to-day I am about ready to bring about, for I am very certain that they are not known now.

I am aware that there has been an increase in the number of enlisted men, as authorized by the Act of August 22, 1912, under President Taft, but the increase is still lamentably insufficient, and as you will recall, Assistant Secretary Roosevelt testified that the navy was 18,000 men short if we had in commission all the vessels which would be required in case of emergency, and 30,000 to 50,000 short according to the confidential war plans.

As to the increase in the ships, I observe that you said that fifty ships had been added to the navy since 1913. This statement gives the impression, unintentionally of course, that fifty NEW ships had been added. If have been examining the list with some care and find that seventy-one vessels have been added to those in full commission since March 3, 1913, and that twenty of these vessels have been laid off, making a net addition of fifty-one. Of the seventy-one added, thirty-five—practically half—are new and include:

Two battleships.
Eleven destroyers.
Fifteen submarines.
Three gunboats.
Three yard tugs.
One tender;

that is, twenty-eight fighting ships have been added. The remaining thirty-two ships used to full commission are old ships, some, very old ships, like the Oregon and the Kearsage, and still more the monitors, a discarded type which are practically of no use except as unwieldy, improvised forts for the submarines. It seems to me that if we wish the American people to know just what the condition of the navy is it should have been stated that only twenty-eight ships have been added to the navy, including only two battleships, authorized in 1913, and that the others are old ships which have been out of commission or laid up in reserve, and that it is little or no use for the fighting line. No battleship, cruiser, and in fact, no cruiser of any kind has been added to the navy since March, 1913, and none has been authorized.

F-4 "IN COMMISSION."

I find included in the list of fifty ships added to full commission F-4, which has just been raised from the harbor bottom where she sank. G-2 and G-3, as you wrote me, have not yet had their official trials, and are not included in the full commission list. They were authorized and contracted fourteen months ago, in 1914, have only just been begun and, so far as I can see from the reports, the really valuable submarines authorized in 1915 have not yet been begun at all. On December 3, 1914, in a statement which you gave to the press, you said:

"Senator Lodge is mistaken in his belief that many of them (referring to the submarines) would be practically useless." I still am of the opinion that, broadly speaking, that statement is correct. There are many submarines on the Atlantic coast, not including the submarines at Panama. Of these twelve were brought to the navy yards and thirteenth being the G-3 which, as you wrote me, had never had her official trial. The D-2 did not go to sea for the maneuvres, but was towed to the New York Navy Yard for repairs. That left eleven submarines On May 24, 1915, in the vicinity of the New York Times about the twelve submarines, you said:

"One was unable to proceed and various others suffered from breakdowns and required repairs of greater or less importance which took them out of the game for various lengths of time. Reports, unofficial, gave a number varying from five to seven as the total submarines effective during the maneuvres." From the official reports which appeared yesterday it seems that all submarines of the F class were substantially the same defects as those which sent F-4 to the bottom. In view of these reports I think I am justified in saying that many of the submarines now extant are practically useless.

NAVY UNPREPARED.

You also said, on December 3, 1914, that you had been particularly interested in the submarines and that a larger number had been appropriated for than in any single previous year, and also:

"That Congress had authorized a distinct departure and advance by providing that one of those ships shall be of the sea-going type, the first that any nation of the world will possess."

That submarine, authorized in 1914, was the Schley, No. 52, and I notice by the report of the Secretary of Construction and Repair that nothing whatever has been done on the construction of that vessel. I think it will be found that while we possess a seagoing type only in the form of authorization, Germany and England possess some which are in action and ready for any emergency. These are submarines not authorized in 1915, as well as the sixteen submarines specifically authorized at the same time, have not, as I have already stated, been begun at all. In brief, it seems to me that the truth is that no effective fleet of submarines exists for us only in anticipation.

TODAY'S STOCK MARKET

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks were irregular at the opening in New York, with coppers and war order issues in sale and Railroads strong. There was an almost immediate rally with war stocks showing the largest gains. The price range was narrow on the whole. The advance in sterling exchange yesterday and its firmness early today had a salutary effect upon the securities market, but frequently afternoon $4.62 was bid for demand sterling. It was quoted at that figure early this morning. Continental exchange was strong is sympathy.

It is stated in New York that the recovery is attributed to the fact that offerings of bills are being withheld, pending the arrival from London of the bankers who are to arrange for foreign credits in this country. It is claimed that standard stocks would advance but for foreign liquidation. It is said to be going on about this season, and that selling upon advances is causing rails to lag. The resumption of exchange operations in metals is looked for as soon as the sterling exchange situation improves.

There was an increase in the interior exchange in London today from $4.65 to $4.75, thus reducing the cost of U. S. American stocks in London with New York.

PRICES ON HIGHER LEVEL.

Fifteen minutes after New York opened most issues were higher than at the close of the market yesterday. Among gains were Allis-Chalmers ½, American Can ¾, Car & Foundry of, American Locomotive ½, Baldwin ¾, Colorado Fuel ½, Crucible 1¾, Republic Steel ¾, Sloss-Sheffield Steel & Iron house 1, American Smelting ¾, Anaconda ⅝, Chino ¼, Union Pacific ⅜, Southern Pacific ⅜, Air Brake 2, Rock Island ¾ and Reading ¾.

At the end of half an hour there was the usual reactionary tendency developed, but prices remained fairly firm. Trading was active at the start but soon decreased in volume.

COPPERS AND ZINCS LOWER.

Coppers are lower since the close of business in Boston at the opening and trading was as quiet as has been the rule of late. Among the changes were Butte & Superior ½, American Zinc ⅛, Calumet & Arizona, ex-dividend, ½, Calumet & Hecla 5, Copper Range ½, Granby ¼, Mohawk ¼ and Superior ⅛. United Fruit was ½ and Shaw Machinery ⅛ higher.

There has been no change in the copper metal situation so far this week. Large selling interests are holding out for 13 cents a pound and smaller interests are shading the price to get business. Sales at 12⅞ cents are reported.

OUR FIRST DUTY IS TO MAINTAIN PEACE; OUR NEXT DUTY IS TO PREPARE FOR WAR

A Question Is Suggested: What IS "News"?

News, According to Webster, Is "Information About Something Before Unknown." It Was Not "News," Therefore, to BOSTON AMERICAN Readers, on Wednesday of THIS Week, That Our Differences With the German Government Had Been Amicably Explained Away, for on Wednesday of LAST Week the AMERICAN Printed Specifically the Plan of Readjustment

READERS of the Boston AMERICAN will not have failed to notice that this newspaper was the first in New England to definitely and accurately forecast the amicable adjustment of the differences between the United States and Germany.

The earliest, and all the succeeding issues, of the Boston AMERICAN of Wednesday, August 25, printed CONSPICUOUSLY the fact that the German ambassador, Count von Bernstorff, was leaving New York for an interview with President Wilson at Washington, "at which he will seek to emphasize these points."

The Boston AMERICAN of WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 25, named the points referred to, briefly these:

That Germany had not interfered with a single ship flying the American flag SINCE the "conversations" regarding the Frye, the Gulflight and the Cushing.

That the German government had taken every possible precaution to prevent attacks on British merchantmen on which Americans were KNOWN to be passengers.

That it was NOT known that Americans were on board the Arabic because the White Star line had kept the passenger list and the date of sailing secret.

THAT EXPRESS ORDERS HAD BEEN GIVEN BY THE GERMAN ADMIRALTY TO SUBMARINE COMMANDERS THAT THEY MUST GIVE ADEQUATE NOTICE TO ALL PASSENGER SHIPS BEFORE ATTACKING THEM, AND THAT IF A GERMAN SUBMARINE SANK THE ARABIC WITHOUT WARNING ITS OFFICERS ACTED IN DIRECT VIOLATION OF ORDERS.

This is the situation as it was officially made public in OTHER newspapers of Wednesday, September 1.

WE call attention to the fact that it was accurately forecasted in THIS newspaper one week previously.

This statement is made in no spirit of vain boastfulness. Represented as it is in all the great capitals of the world by newspapermen of tact, experience and real ability, the organization of which the Boston AMERICAN is a part is in a position to get the news FIRST and to print the news while it IS news.

The circulation of the Boston AMERICAN is larger than that of all the other Boston evening newspapers combined.

There are many reasons for this. AMONG them is the fact that the AMERICAN is NEVER FOUND TRAILING.

Litter in the Parks

Sundry park officials, policemen and others responsible for the care and order of our city parks, complain that some of our best breathing spots are marred by visitors, who litter the grass and shady places with lunch boxes, paper bags, wrappers and remnants of food.

Strange to say, the children and youth are not blamed. It's the grown-ups that are the chief offenders—grown-ups who ought to know better, but who thoughtlessly infringe on the rights of others. There is an ordinance forbidding this littering of the parks, but the police do not want to be over officious. It is better that the people should protect their own property by exercising a little care.

Make a resolution today—right off now, as you read this—to be more careful in Marine Park, in Franklin Park, in all the other beautiful green spaces bought with the people's money. Throw your waste paper in the receptacles provided for such refuse. Do your share to keep the city parks beautiful and attractive. You will be repaid fourfold in your own pleasure.

WHY IS IT?

More Truth Than Poetry

By James J. Montague

Man

HOW wise, how wonderful is man;
He masters light and heat and motion,
He chains the lightnings to his van,
He holds in check the raging ocean.
In cities, towering toward the sky,
His hands the rugged rocks assemble;
At his light-hearted hunting cry
The monarchs of the forest tremble.
And yet the tiniest seaside skeet
That flies by night has got him beat.

HOW masterful, how great is man;
He mows down mountains, bridges chasms,
His grand constructive cosmic plan
Includes both stars and protoplasms.
His sceptre sways the speeding world,
His toys are tempest, wave and fire;
The very planets may be whirled
Some time to suit his high desire.
Yet every germ that dwells the breezes
Can bite him when and where he pleases!

HOW noble, how august is man;
A creature formed of blood and iron;
In proof of which the reader can Consult the works of Mr. Byron.
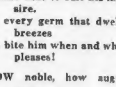
He (man, not Byron) tames the winds—
You know what frightful forces winds are—
He gains the riches of the Inds,
Although I'm not quite sure what Inds are.
But any skirt that comes along
Can teach him that he don't belong.



Not Much to Return To

"I believe that the Republican party has returned to its own"—William H. Taft. According to the last Presidential election returns "its own" consisted of Utah and Vermont.

If This Be Treason, Make the Most of It

How long has the act of inciting to preparedness been an offence against the peace and dignity of the War Department?

Science for Workers

By Edgar Lucien Larkin

SIMON NEWCOMB, one of the most eminent mathematicians, wrote:

"Speaking roughly, we have reason, from the data so far available, to believe that the stars of the Milky Way are situated at a distance between 100,000,000 and 200,000,000 times the distance of the sun.

"It is not a chance; it is not even a collection of things, each of which came into existence its own separate way. If it were there could be nothing in common between two widely separated regions of the universe. But, as a matter of fact, science shows unity in the whole structure and diversity only in details.

"The universe, so far as we can see it, is a bounded whole. It is surrounded by an immense girdle of stars, which to our vision appears as the Milky Way. While we cannot set exact limits to its distance, we may yet confidently say that it is bounded."

By some astronomers the sidereal structure is conceived to be in the shape of a bi-convex lens, with diameter eight times greater than the thickness, the longer diameter being in the plane of the Galaxy. These are estimates merely of a circle whose centre is the earth. The sun, our star, removed into these cosmic deeps so distant from the earth, would appear to us as a tiny eleventh-magnitude stellar point, and many clusters and groups are at least 400 light years away. The estimate of the Orion star, Rigel, is that its distance is 330 light years, and it is 8,000 times brighter than the sun, while the giant sun Canopus, in the distant south, is 200,000 times greater than the sun.

The mass of the variable star Algol is about twenty times that of our home star. The parallax of Vega, taken at 0.11 second, is so far from here that the sun and entire solar system with it, moving twelve miles per second, would require 558,000 years to reach that shining glory. So far, forty-three stars have parallaxes large enough to be measured directly by the micrometer.

The difficulty is in measuring such small angles. One second of arc is in such common use that an idea of its value may be gained by a comparison. Any object one inch long as a stick, or one inch in diameter, as a little sphere, must be removed from the eye to a distance of three and one-quarter miles to appear as one second of arc. But as above, the parallax of the star Vega is given as only one-ninth or 0.11 second. Mechanics in the habit of accurate measurement will appreciate these difficulties.

Companions

By Jane McLean

I HAVE a friend so very strange and wonderful to know,
Her eyes are deep; I love to watch the wonder in them grow;
And when she speaks the air vibrates with music soft and low,
Sometimes I am afraid of her—I fear the wrongful shine
Deep in the stormy eyes of her, a strange unspoken sign
That she is friend to many, but I may not call her mine.
Sometimes I chafe beneath her rule, when all the world is gay,
And ventures out alone without her nod to point the way.
And mingle with the many on the highroad gone astray
Sometimes I can but feel her breath upon the breezes blown;
Her name is Truth, but when I feel her fingers in my own
And know that she has read my soul, I feel that I have grown.

How to Loosen the Grip of Heredity

Ella Wheeler Wilcox Says Infinite Patience and Scientific Teaching Will Cure the Child With a Tendency Toward Natural Depravity

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1915, by the Star Company.

WILL a child begotten of criminally depraved parents, if brought up under the most moral environment and surrounded by the most elevating conditions, develop any of the traits of character of the father and mother by reason of the influence of heredity?

It all "depends."

Such a child may go back three, four or five generations and give to the world the sterling virtues of noble ancestors, or it may go still farther back to its own former incarnations and carry out some long-suppressed tendency for good or ill, or it may prove to be what its parents were.

But, scientifically reared, such a child, no matter what its inheritance, in itself or from its parents, could become a power for good in the world.

It would naturally require more care and greater effort to produce such a result than if the child started with moral tendencies, just as it requires greater effort to build up a sickly, anemic infant into a robust maturity than to carry a strong, virile child to the same result.

But both can be done.

It would not be sufficient merely to give this child of depraved parents a good education and Christian influences. He must have more than all the libraries of Mr. Carnegie or all the churches of the land are giving to the growing generation.

He must have very nearly as constant and persistent and patient training as that which has been given to Helen Keller, the blind and deaf wonder of the century. Hour by hour, day by day, week by week, year by year, the unfolding mind must be led to think tender, loving, kind, protecting thoughts.

The moral brain cells must be developed as the sense of touch is developed in the blind. He must be taught to think that he inherits all of God's qualities—love, generosity, goodness, truth, kindness, protection, justice. He must never be told that he has a vicious origin, or be made to think that he possesses any unfortunate trait.

Stories of noble conduct and of courage, kindness and benevolence should be told him in his early youth, and he should never be allowed to think or ponder over tales of vice or crime.

Extreme care should be exercised over his choice of associates, books and pastimes. He should not be taught to shoot or hunt, but instead should be interested in natural history, and made to realize the dependence of animals upon the kindness of man and the responsibility of man to protect all weaker creatures from the cruelty and injustice of the stronger.

Very early in life the important lesson of self-control should be taught the child and the power of the focused thought and the unswerving will.

Some time there will be a great scientific institution where all these things will be taught to perverted minds and to the offspring of the vicious, just as there are institutions now for teaching the deaf and the blind and the idiotic; and then we will need no prisons, no reformatories, no electric chairs.

God and man speed the day!

Harriet Ford Tells How a Girl May Succeed as a Dramatist

By Harriet Ford

Miss Ford, author of three consecutive successes, "The Argyle Case," "The Dummy" and "Polygamy," told in Tuesday's Boston AMERICAN why the possession of a dramatic instinct is the first requisite in play-writing.

PLAYS cannot be written by rule, but there are certain rules that must be obeyed. First, put up your frame work as an architect does the steel skeleton of a high building.

You are about to compress a section of life into four acts that will occupy in presentation two hours. The climaxes of a drama control its whole structure, and every incident must vitally relate to the whole. Either developing plot or character, outline your cast so as to use as few people as possible to present your story. Select well contrasted characters.

Avoid obvious exposition, that is—Do not permit a character to recount to another character matter he would not logically repeat at that moment, or would have logically told long before the play opened. You must find some other way to inform your audience. One sentence may convey all that is necessary of a character's previous history.

Be sure the entrance of a character comes with probability in a natural sequence of events. Do not assume dramatic license for the passage of time. You destroy illusion instantly.

In other words, do not send a character from the scene on an errand that will occupy an hour and bring him back with the thing accomplished in five or ten minutes. Avoid a succession of duologues.

The length of a scene is not arbitrary, neither is the length of an act. The main object is to convey in as compact a form as possible the idea of the scene. Cut out everything that does not advance your plot or reveal character. The average length of an act is half an hour, but it is immaterial whether the act is shorter or longer.

A first act sometimes runs long in order completely to present the complication, and the fourth act frequently runs short because the threads can be drawn together quickly.

The whole play should run a full two hours. The time it occupies to read aloud is a fair average of the time it will take in acting.

I always feel the interest of a play should be cumulative from the rise of the curtain on the first act to its fall on the last. That is, it should not rise to the end of Act One, and fall to the curtain of Act Two, then rise again to the climax of Act Three, and drop during Act Four. Nor should it sweep up to the climax of Act Three and then drop during the succeeding act. In fact, it should not run like but like

Construct so that the interest at the curtain of each act is suspensive and, if possible, open the succeeding act so that it "ties." That means, the first scene is logically in sequence with the last scene of the preceding act in time and place. You are not compelled to observe the unities, but if you can, your drama will be the stronger for it.

Do not make characters talk alike. Avoid soliloquies. Avoid fine speeches.

Miss Ford will tell in her next article how the best subject for a good play is to be selected.

In-Shoots

Riches do not always bring happiness, but they will insure one a decent funeral.

In most instances the shortage of brains is accompanied by increased vocabulary.

Push of the hoggish variety does not always promote lasting popularity.

It is easy to size up egotism that is not causing our own skulls to bulge.

When out on the busy highway it is better to hold your head up whether there is anything in it or not.
